PASSAGE OF LAW TO GUARD CITY'S WHARF RIGHTS IS ADVOCATED

Writer Declares People Should Legislate So Courts Cannot Misinterpret.

Banks, Or., Dec. 21.—To the Editor of The Journal.—Oregon, bondridden, sore and weary, extends greetings to California and begs leave to rejoice with her over the magnificent Christmas gift bestowed in the decision of the California supreme court in the case of the State vs. the Southern Pacific company. This decision upholds the state's contention that its title to the San Pedro foreshore is only as sovereign in trust for the people and cannot be alienated. It is an affirmation of Judge Bordwell's decision in the lower court for Los Angeles, rendered in an opinion the most comprehensive, exhaustive, and lucid of any yet written in this country on the question of riparian rights on navigable waters.
By this decision, California secures for public development the strategic terminal properties of the foreshore of harbors and saves, as stated in yesterday's Journal report, millions of dollars that have been appropriated and would otherwise have to be used for the purchase of the soil for the improvements.
California had sought in the constitution of 1879 (Art. XV, section 2) to protect itself against existing abuses of the provision: "All tidelands within two miles of any incorporated town or city of this state, and fronting upon the waters of any harbor, estuary, bay or river, shall be withheld from private sale to private persons, partnerships or corporations."
Our other sister state of Washington has protected its harbors by the establishment, beside the meander line (which is the boundary of the upland owners' title in fee) two other lines, the inner and the outer line. Between the meander line and the inner line the state may sell, between the inner and the outer, it may not.
How much more necessary it is that the public rights in Portland harbor shall be protected, is evident upon comparison of the respective areas of the several harbors.
The only legislation attempted in Oregon corresponding with that of her sister states relating to harbor rights is the wharf right act of 1882, extending to upland owners the "privilege" of constructing wharves over the state's land to deep water.
It is illogical to presume that Oregon would seek to grant "way its harbor rights at the same time California and Washington were seeking to protect and secure theirs, or that the public should be deprived of wharf rights in a port city which it enjoys generally along navigable waters outside of terminal points.
Yet by the Oregon court's recent decision such is the result. The Willamette river is now as a result widely everywhere else than in the terminal city of Portland, and the state has only abrogated its rights where they are most needed.
No such result was contemplated or intended by the act, and the decision is a violence against the law.
In the fight against unbridled tyranny, Los Angeles has its Lemon Growers' association, San Francisco and Puget sound have their ambitions, and Portland also, to free itself from this incubus, and prove itself worthy of its station as port for the Columbia river and basin, must reassert its right to the use of all its harbor area, uninterfered with by riparian claims, which are indeed by law subject to the paramount right of commerce and navigation. In fact, were this not so and the state's right had irrevocably been vested in the riparian claimant as asserted in the Oregon decision, then would it be incumbent upon the city and state to incur their "right of regulation," to compel those claimants to carry out the purpose for which the wharfright act was passed and to construct such wharf facilities as the needs of the port require. Otherwise it is to say that the foreshore belongs to the riparian to sell and to the public to improve, a contention which the most ardent plutocrat would hardly care to assume.
It is high time the people were given an opportunity to assert through the initiative the policy which they desire as to the use of terminal foreshores. The properties are theirs, the state's title is a trust for them. The policy declared by our court (of late) is one of dispossession. Let the people themselves say whether they accept as true such declaration of public policy.
I have long urged this step upon those in position to promote to state wide initiative, and they have constantly deferred to the courts. The courts have not the right to make our laws, only to interpret them. Our Oregon court in, as I have pointed out, an anomaly belonging properly only to a retrograde past. Let us pass a law so plain and specific

COUNCIL AT ST. JOHNS SELECTS 2 PARK SITES TO BE VOTED AS UNIT

Unless Action Rescinded Plan Favored by Citizens Will Not Go Before People.

St. Johns, Or., Dec. 24.—The city council at its meeting last night selected the Caples and Catlin tracts as the park sites to be voted on as a unit at the primary election in March. The motion was made by Councilman Vincent, and seconded by Councilman Martin.
Despite its advocacy of voting on each of the four sites separately, a citizens' meeting held Monday adopted the unit plan in its resolution, which was to be presented to the council at its meeting Tuesday of next week by Principal Charles H. Boyd of St. Johns schools, who presided. Now, however, unless the council should rescind its action later, the park site question is definitely settled, with only two tracts to be voted on.
The Caples tract is on the carline and bounded by Dawson, Tyler and Pol streets and Central avenue. The Catlin tract is on Willamette boulevard, near Catlin avenue.
In addition to these two tracts selected by the council, the meeting Monday night, which filled the auditorium of the city hall, selected two other sites, the Dr. Cook tract in East St. Johns and the Stearns tract on Willamette boulevard, near Buchanan street, overlooking the river, with the Allen tract adjoining it in the rear.
The Stearns tract had previously been rejected at separate meetings held by citizens of ward 1 and ward 2. It is hoped that the unit plan of voting will prevent sectionalism, as otherwise one district in the city might vote for the park site in its section and vote down all others.
At the citizens' meeting Principal Boyd was made chairman with power to appoint 12 associates of a committee to conduct a publicity campaign to bring the park site matter before the people and create public sentiment in favor of their acquisition.

Terry claimed that some months ago he was driving his machine over the bridge near Milwaukie after night and that the bridge being four feet wider than the roadbed, one of the front wheels of his auto ran over the edge when he left the bridge, causing himself and machine to be precipitated to the bottom of the embankment. DISAGREEMENT IN LAND COMPANY CAUSES SUIT

The troubles of the Swedish Land & Colonization company, which brought about bad blood between the retiring and present presidents and caused the arrest of J. C. Lannerberg on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon on John Anderson 10 days ago resulted also in the filing of a suit in the circuit court yesterday by John Naze against Attorney Chester A. Sheppard.
Naze alleges that he became a partner in the first organization of the company, putting up $3200 in cash, and that the company was later incorporated. Sheppard drew up the articles of incorporation, and Naze alleges that he retained Sheppard to see that the $3200 was made a liability of the corporation and to protect his interests. Sheppard, he said, received 166 2-3 shares of stock for his fee, and then failed to perform his part of the bargain. Naze seeks to recover this stock. Miss Lida M. O'Bryen appears as attorney for Naze.
Lannerberg was president of the company, but was recently succeeded by Anderson. Lannerberg is under bonds at present awaiting the action of the grand jury.
