CHILDREN OF BILOXI SALUTE PRESIDENT. They Line Road While Willson Reviews Them From Automobile.

(United Press Lined Wire.) Pass Christian, Miss., Jan. 9.—President Woodrow Wilson like children today he motored on the road leading to Biloxi, so the school children could see him. They were lined up along the road waving banners and flags as he approached. The president stood uncovered during the review.

Recently Cecil Brown, aged 13 years, grandson of a Confederate soldier, stopped the president's automobile. The lad was clad in a Confederate uniform. He presented the president with a box of candy, saying: "My mother made this, and you just bet it's good, too."

Later the president wrote Cecil a letter thanking him for the candy. Today Cecil again stopped the president's automobile. This time he carried a bouquet. A note attached read: "I liked your letter so much, Mr. President, that I brought these flowers. Please write to me when you get back home."

He suggested seven days' imprisonment for Colonel Von Reuter and three for Lieutenant Schind, the former for wrongful imprisonment and the latter for assault.

There were other accusations against the officers but the prosecutor dropped them.
