

PROGRESSIVE LEADERS DECLINE TO ESPOUSE CARTER'S CANDIDACY

President of Lincoln Club Declared to Be Alone in Endorsement of Republican.

If some of the powers that be in local Progressive circles reflect the sentiment of their party, Charles W. Ackerson, who recently called upon W. A. Carter in his campaign for the Republican nomination for governor, stands grandly and gloriously alone.

Both T. B. Neuhausen, chairman of the Progressive party in this state, and D. L. Povey, president of the Multnomah County Progressive club, which is said to be the live organization of that party in Oregon, agree that Mr. Ackerson's espousal of Mr. Carter's cause is purely personal, but as to being the sentiment of the party as a whole, nay, nay.

Said President Povey of the Multnomah County Progressive club:

Mark Is Over.

"Reading Mr. Ackerson's remarks about W. A. Carter's candidacy for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, as quoted in The Journal, I presume he was voicing his personal sentiments, which I concede to every man and woman. But as to voicing the sentiments of the Progressives of Oregon, he overshoots the mark. We do not concede to Mr. Ackerson or to any other party the right to call the Progressives to the assistance of any candidate, be he Republican or Democrat. We do not take the position that the Progressives rank and file shall be used to draw the chestnuts from the fire for the benefit of any candidate of other parties.

"If Mr. Carter is a Progressive of the type Mr. Ackerson claims he is, then Mr. Carter is in the wrong company when he runs as a Republican. This is clear to any voter who feels the Progressive ideas are laid down in the Progressive articles of faith, especially after taking a long distance view of the Republican national committee's meeting last month in Washington.

Prayer for Democratic Disaster.

"This meeting did not resolve to do anything to take away the control of the Republican party from Barnes, Penrose, Cannon and the champions of invisible government, but resulted in a sort of prayer meeting asking that calamities visit the Democratic party to such an extent that the cries of poverty shall be heard throughout the land and thus restore the Republican party to power in 1916. And understanding this situation, Mr. Carter should have run as a Progressive.

"I assure you the Progressives will nominate a man of true Progressive ideas, who will place devotion to principle above numerical strength of registration.

State Chairman Neuhausen said:

Echo Only Will Answer Call.

"Mr. Ackerson is entitled, of course, to entertain and express his own views on political and other matters but it should be clearly understood that in doing so he represents solely his own individual ideas and not those of either the leaders or the rank and file of the Progressive party. In signing his proclamation as president of the Lincoln Progressive club, he simply maintains the splendid isolation to which his party has consigned him, as the Lincoln club was practically absorbed some weeks ago by the Multnomah County Progressive club, whose president is a real Progressive. Mr. Ackerson's noisy call to the members of the party to support Mr. Carter will meet with a responsive but the response will simply be the echo of Mr. Ackerson's own voice.

Progressives Have Own Candidates.

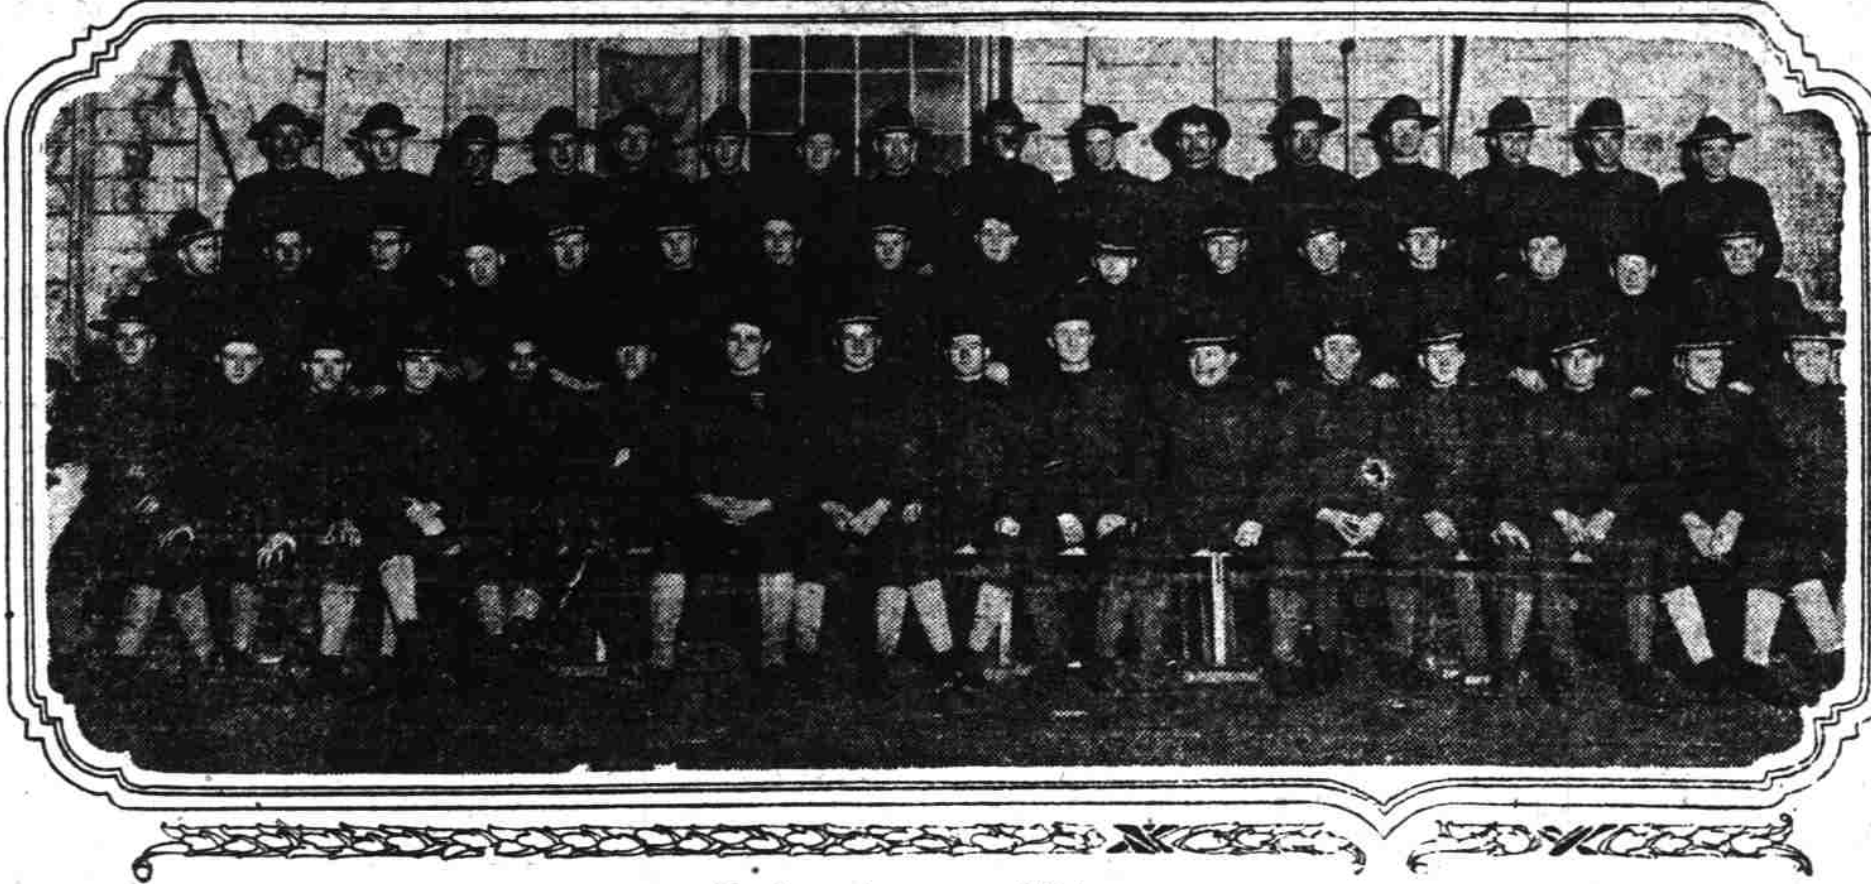

"Against Mr. Carter personally I have nothing to say. He is a very pleasant gentleman but I know he is laboring under a delusion if he imagines that Ackerson's appeal, or that of anybody else, will induce the Progressives to register as Republicans in order to help nominate him. Mr. Carter's platform is a symposium of agreeable reflections on matters political and is apparently designed to please everybody and offend nobody. There will probably be two or three candidates for the Progressive nomination for governor and their platforms will undoubtedly contain the declaration of principles which was incorporated in the Progressive party committee's address to the Oregon legislature on February first last year. Regardless of party affiliations, however, no man should run for governor or any other high office unless he has distinguished himself by rendering valuable public service to the community he aspires to represent."

CEDAR IS VALUABLE IN CENTRAL OREGON

Redmond, Or., Jan. 16.—In this section of country the central Oregon homesteader finds the growth of cedar that spreads over the plains and hills an ever present help in time of trouble. He secures fuel and fence posts from this land, and the groves afford shelter to his stock in winter. When the land is wanted for agricultural purposes it is not difficult to clear away the cedar, and on the less desirable or rocky hillside it still continues to furnish a serviceable resource to offset the fuel trust and help out the cheerful family hearth.

If done in good faith the clearing off of the cedar timber from a homestead, and the selling of the wood or posts is regarded with indifference by Uncle Sam. There have been some who imposed upon the letter and spirit of the law in this respect, and they have sold timber from public lands, and otherwise commercialized the natural cedar growths. At least there is some suspicion on the part of Uncle Sam to this effect, and inquiries have been made that may require explanations in court before the investigation has been completed.

The bona fide homesteader is attracted to a country where the land question is solved for him so well as it is in this vicinity, and Uncle Sam wishes to keep that attraction unimpaired. The vast tracts of irrigated lands around Redmond that will soon be occupied by sturdy American home builders, but now not developed, will need all the cedar growing upon the lands that can be cultivated.

The cedar groves of Crook county are a valuable asset. Wood celler, spare that tree. Uncle Sam's eagle optic is upon you, and unless it is a tree on your own homestead, and that homestead is being looked after in good faith, you would do better to secure some other means of getting funds.

SANITARY INSPECTORS WORK AT MEDFORD

Medford, Or., Jan. 16.—Deputies from the office of J. D. Mickle dairy and food commissioner, have been busy for several days inspecting markets, groceries, bakeries, restaurants and slaughter houses in this county. As a result a restaurant man from Ashland has paid a fine of $25 in the justice court of Jacksonville for selling adulterated food and two restaurant men of Medford will be tried Tuesday for similar offenses. Several of the restaurants in Medford were found to be in very unsanitary condition. An immediate cleanup was ordered. One dairy was temporarily closed. Three of the four dairies, the inspectors say, are in worse condition than they were six months ago, when they were inspected for the first time. The markets and slaughter houses and all but one dairy are in good condition. A committee from the local woman's club accompanied the inspectors.

PRUNE CROP LEADS TO UNION LITIGATION

Milton, Or., Jan. 16.—Elder W. W. Steward, Peter Hermann and Mrs. Laura Jenkins have entered suit against the Milton Fruitgrowers' union for an accounting in connection with the prune crop of 1912. It seems that these persons are not members of the union and claim for their product the market price of the prunes when delivered to the union. The practice of the union has been to pool the prunes of the growers and in these cases the plaintiffs in the suit contend that by the pooling process, extending over several weeks, they have lost from $200 to $1000, and they ask that a judgment be given them for the market price of the prunes on the day they were delivered to the Milton Fruitgrowers' union.

COLFAX INTERESTED IN CASE OF CITY FATHERS

(Special to The Journal.)

Colfax, Wash., Jan. 16.—Many were present at a superior court to hear the case against the city councilmen for selling goods to the city, the charges having been brought by Eugene Brown. Councilmen Simon Dryden, W. A. Nelson, Barney McNelly and R. E. Reed were charged with selling goods to the city, and a restraining order was issued against payment of their bills. Warrants due W. Yedder, contractor for building of the new city hall, are involved in the case. Judge McCroskey today issued a stipulation order granting 20 days' time holding—restraining order to be in effect on warrants involved in this suit only.

OREGON IS DESCRIBED BY 'GREAT THUNDERER'

London Times Prints 2-Page Article That Includes Reference to River Work.

The two pages given to description of Oregon and its resources in the Pacific coast number of the London Times contain reference to the Columbia river, as a port—its channel and the bar at its mouth—which has large interest to those who are interested in the campaign to improve the channel and deepen the water over the bar, a campaign which, so far as Portland is concerned, is to be put on a definite basis at a meeting called by President Averill of the chamber of commerce for next Monday or Tuesday.

"The Columbia," reads the article in the Times, "is a fine nature harbor and waterway; yet, owing to the magnitude of its watershed and the vast amount of silt brought down from the mountains and deposited as an effective bar at the mouth of the river, the work of clearing and deepening a channel through which vessels of heavy draught might safely pass has entailed the unremitting labor of the last 20 years. The construction of a jetty two and a half miles long on the north side has been commenced. In order that work may not be suspended while awaiting the voting of more funds by congress, the ports of Portland and Astoria have jointly provided $500,000, in the hope that congress will be induced to provide uninterrupted work. By this means the north jetty will be completed in three years.

"At the present time Portland is chiefly responsible for the maintenance of a deep channel in the lower river. With funds provided by local taxation a depth of 28 feet has been attained by dredging the several bars between Portland and the sea, and dredgers are now increasing the depth to 30 feet, and the intention is to prosecute dredging as navigation requires, with a view to enabling vessels of any size to come up the river at any time."

The article about the Columbia river describes in considerable detail the size of the river and the extent of its basin.

ASIATIC TROOPS ARE ADVANCED BY TURKEY

Warlike Preparations Made by Ottoman Government for Spring Campaign.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

Vienna, Jan. 16.—There were further signs at Constantinople today of preparations on the sultan's part for a renewal of campaigning in the Balkans in the spring, according to advices from the Turkish capital.

The war office, it was stated, had taken steps to begin a heavy movement of Asiatic troops northward to Scutari, evidently, with a view to having them handy on short notice. The delay the Ottoman government experienced in mobilizing its Asiatic levies promptly, had much to do with the disasters Turkish arms suffered in the recent war.

Dispatches from Sofia said today that disease is beginning to work dreadful havoc with the famine-stricken Bulgarian population. Smallpox is spreading, and at several places epidemics of cerebro spinal meningitis have broken out.
