CANADIAN CATTLE SCARE WILL HAVE A PERMANENT EFFECT UPON TRADE HERE

Weakening Influence Is Only Temporary Affair and as Soon as the Surplus Is Out of the Way Market Will Probably Do Better: Total Supplies Show Shortage.

By Hyman H. Cohen.

The extreme weakness that has been shown in the cattle market for some days is causing alarm among some interests of the interior. It is very unfortunate that such a condition could exist at this time of the year when it takes so much money to put cattle in prime condition, but the fact remains the market is not only extrememains the market is not only extremeweak and low priced but unnatur-sluggish for this time of the

There is much blame in this matter that can be safely attached to Puget on average trading during the remain-Sound killers who have purchased quite liberally of Canadian cattle of late Temporarily they have forced the market into a deep rut from which the market into a deep rut from which it will be hard to extract the trade. The ultimate position of the market for cattle is just as sound today as it was when tops were selling at $8 or better. There is just as great a shortage in the country as then; the only difference being that the amount of stuff that has come to market has increased. While it is not likely that cattle prices will rule much higher than pre-vious to the downfall of the market recently, there is sure to be a reaction unless weather conditions are such that receipts continue liberal and demand limited. With the Lenten season not far away, there will naturally be some hesitation among killers to stock up with supplies. Seemingly it would be a that there will be much offering from very good investment for them to purchase cittle at low prices and hold lack of feed was the only cause of the them for an advance, but the cost of present rush to sell.

keeping them in killers' pens is much greater than they can be kept at home, that all of the benefits derived from purchasing them at a low price would disappear. It is a number of months from this time until grass cattle can possibly enter the market. Until then there are likely to be various periods wherein supplies of cattle will be at a famine stage. During such intervals there is no doubt that extreme values will be forced.

Those that look for far better values advance is likely that will bring values to the former high mark or frac-tionally above it, but far beyond that range would simply mean that the average consumer would be compelled gether. At the present time the meat trade is being curtailed by the great numbers of smelt that are being caught in the Cowlitz and for which extremely low prices are ruling.

Those that have excellent quality cattle need have no fear of price results for the future of the present season. There has been and is always a good demand for extreme quality. Little of this has been offered recently, therefore it would be extremely hard to tell what the price would be to tell what the price would be With the present rush of Canadian cattle to market over, it is not likely that there will be much offering from the regular buyer of the Union Meat ompany, at Corvallis. The position of the hog market here. sad to relate, is still one of the poorest in the entire country. The rut into which the local market has fallen is so deep that all efforts to force higher figures consistent with what is happening elsewhere, have failed.

The highest market in the east today stands at $8.60 or 55c above the extreme figure here. As a general rule the North Portland market is that much above specified.

There were no fresh arrivals for the much above anything in the east, therefore compared with the normal standing of the trade here, prevailing prices are over $1 too low. At the moment there seems to be no hope for any material improvement in the price of swine here, unless killers—out of the goodness in their hearts—decide to give country interests more for their product. So far as the general market is concerned, there is absolutely no need of buyers digging down into their pockets to give higher prices for swine. They are already getting all the hogs they need, in fact practically every one has a surplus at this time. Higher prices are generally given only to stimulate an increased supply but a further increase in offerings at this time would ikely wreck the already low price At Chicago there was a strong tone in the hog market for the day, values being a nickel better than yesterday. Kansas City hog market was strong today at an advance of a dime.

The market for wheat, while firm, is showing no further price changes since the advance of 1d announced in these reports yesterday. Some of the leading buyers say they are not offering above 86c for club, but there seems to be a sufficient amount of business available at 87c to establish the quotation there so far as sellers are concerned.

Coarse grains continue quiet and generally neglected.

While strenuous efforts are still being made to force the price of patent flour higher, quotations remain stationary.

WHEAT — Producers' prices, track

The extreme weakness in which the cattle market here has fallen is indicated by the sale late yesterday afternoon of several lots of first class stuff that had been fed on grain for a period of 120 days, at $7.50. Therefore it is easy to see what ordinary hay fed of this superb quality.
