Chatterer Does Some Hard Thinking By Thornton W. Burgess. (Copyright, 1914, by J. G. Lloyd.)

Chatterer the Red Squirrel sat in the doorway of his winter home, which, you know, was the summer home of Drummer the Woodpecker, and Chaterer was doing some hard thinking. Right down in his heart he was almost sure that Farmer Brown's boy was eady and willing to be the friend of all the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows, just as Tommy Tit the Chikadee had said a day or two before. But somehow it was dreadfully hard to really and truly believe it. It always is hard work to believe a thing when you always have believed just the other way around. All, or nearly all, the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows had looked on Farmer Brown's boy as their greatest enemy for so long that even when Tommy Tit actually did what he had said he would do and ate from the hand of Farmer Brown's

Tommy Tit insisted that they could.

"If you and Farmer Brown's boy are of the other little forest and meadow not friends it is all your own fault," people were afraid to do. Chatterer said Tommy. away and never give him a chance? "I suppose," said Chatterer to himself as he thought it all over. "I suppose that I could try it for myself. He certainly was good to me when I was his prisoner, and it was he himself who called Tommy Tit. let me go. I-I'd like ever and ever so ard and see if he is anywhere about."

Chatterer scampered down from the then with it held tight in his teeth old apple tree and scurried along the old raced back to the safety of the old stone wall in the direction of Farmer stone wall. Not until he was there did Brown's dooryard. When he reached he dare to so much as look to see what the edge of it he very carefully peeped Farmer Brown's boy was doing. When out. He was whistle was very soft and sweet and smiling, and somehow that smile made good to hear, and what it said was: Chatterer suddenly feel very brave. No Phoebe, Phoebe."

Chatterer knew right away that he be very bad at heart. Perhaps Tommy was calling Tommy Tit the Chickadee, Tit was right, after all. He would and he was not surprised to hear a think it all over and try again the next soft reply -- "Phoe-be, dee, dee, dee, day. So he scampered back to his Phoe-be"-- from the Old Orchard.
