Mr. Teal and his Oregon companions were heard very courteously by the attorney general yesterday afternoon, although at the outset of the conference McReynolds told them his mind was made up.

Mr. Teal suggested that inasmuch as he had foreclosed the matter as far as the department of justice is concerned the Oregon and California people should have an opportunity to present their case to the courts.

General McReynolds readily assented to this but said he could not formally promise the opportunity to intervene as that was a matter not in his control. Teal expressed regret that McReynolds, before acting, had not taken the matter up with those qualified to speak for the people of Oregon.

Felts, Colorado manager for the Baldwin-Felts detective agency, before the congressional committee engaged in investigating the coal mine war between employers and employees in the southern part of the state. That firearms were used freely he did not try to deny, but in all the engagements he mentioned he said the strikers were the aggressors, his men acting on the defensive. In the "battle of Ludlow," as he referred to it, when a force of deputies attempted a raid on an armed train to the strikers' camp at Ludlow, his forces were fired, he said, on each side.

He asserted that several of his men were individually attacked and charged that "a unionist, at the instigation of union organizers," assassinated Detective Joseph Benson, a Colorado Fuel & Iron company's Pueblo steel plant. On it was mounted a machine gun and the guards always carried loaded rifles. The witness admitted that the machine gun was the same one used by his agency in the West Virginia mine strike. The mine owners, he added, paid for bringing it from West Virginia to Colorado.

SELF DESTRUCTION IS TERMED COWARDLY

"Self destruction is a cowardly way of giving up the fight," said Rev. "All normal beings flinch from the very idea of ending life in this way. "And yet there are other ways of killing one's self besides the abrupt taking of life. The man who follows evil habits is encompassing his own death, perhaps slowly, but none the less surely. The phrase of sin is death is just as true today as it ever was. "There is suicide of soul as well as of body. The man who persists in ignoring God will, dwarf and finally kill his spiritual nature. Only by accepting Christ and his teachings can we round out a full life, bodily and spiritually." Mr. Marcotte's subject tomorrow at 12:15 o'clock will be "The Things God Has Prepared." All men are invited to attend.
