FAMOUS FIGHTERS DID RING TRAINING THERE Chimney Stump and Few Splinters All That Remain of Place.

By W. W. Naughton. San Francisco, Cal., March 1.—Who has not heard of Croll's garden, Alameda, in its day the most popular training camp for pugilists within a score of miles of San Francisco?

The place referred to had vogue, however, before it was known as Croll's. It was called Neptune Garden 30 years ago, and it was a favorite Sunday lounging place for people from the San Francisco side of the bay.

There were skating rinks, shooting galleries, dancing pavilions, and what not attached to it in those years, and not the least of its attractions was the ice cold beer that was drawn in cisterns from a thousand feet.

The Alameda folk resented the idea of catering to San Francisco's Sunday thirst and love of frivolity, and by a vote of three to two, the Neptune Garden was sold.

Down through the years the buildings and the fountains and the stately disappeared piecemeal, and Croll's held just in time by the passing of the years, a garish structure, all peaks and angles known as the Wigwam.

A few days ago a crew of carpenters was busy dismantling the Wigwam, and when the old line sports heard of the fact, pugilistic memories of the long ago were revived.

By the same token, many of the stars of the boxing arena who trained in the Wigwam have passed to the beyond. Let me name a few of the names: Jack Dempsey, Tommy Warren, Paddy Duffy, Peter Jackson, Joe Gans and Joe Dixon.
