What Society is Doing BY NONA LAWLER

was the motif for a most interesting reception Saturday afternoon which was given by her children and grandchildren at the home of her son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. George Hovenden, in East Seventeenth and Wasco streets. The occasion was the seventy-fifth birth day of Mrs. Hovenden. She is a pioneer of 1852, having come from Australia to Portland. Her family living here now extends to four generations and they have a wide circle of friends throughout the state. There were about 100 guests called during the Little Peggy Cannon, a great grandchild of Mrs. Hovenden, received the cards at the door and three other little great grandchildren present were Ruth Grover, Sarah Cannon and Frank Hovenden Gilbert.

Mrs. Hovenden's daughters, Mrs. Dennis, Mrs. M. L. Jones, Mrs. F. N. Gilbert and Mrs. George Hovenden, re-ceived with her. The rooms were gayly arrayed with quantities of daf-fodils and yellow tulips arranged most artistically from a background of Oregon grape. In the dining room the same decorations prevailed with an artistic centerpiece of tulips gracing the tea table. Presiding at the samovars were: Mrs. B. T. Soden, a sister-inlaw of Mrs. Hovenden; Mrs. Charles Smith, Mrs. H. S. Gilbert and Mrs. C. W. Grover. They were assisted about the room by Miss Carolyn Cannon, Miss Grace Hovenden, Miss Inez Chapin and Miss Gertrude Jones.

of the Black Mask, is no ordinary vocalist was amply proved yesterday at the Globe theatre, where she will be for the remainder of this week. Her actual appearance was prefaced with a motion picture film showing her equestrian powers in riding wild horses with a side saddle, a distinction she is said to enjoy without a rival. Madame was stunningly gowned in black with a mantle of scarlet draped about her

Her voice is a beautiful soprano, of surprising size and range with quality almost contralto in the lower. Her selections yesterday, including the encores demanded, were "Il Bacio" by L. Arditi, "The Rosary," "My Hero" from the Chocolate Soldier, and "Annie Laurie." She has an immense repertoire and will sing requests from it if they are made known at the theatre

Her repertoire, her voice, her mastery of vocal art and her stage presence all lend color to the persistent rumor that she was once a grand opera singer of distinction. Madame is suported on the bill by an excellent picture program with Dr. Polly, the feature. It is a delightful Vitagraph comedy drama with Lillian Walker and Wallie Van in the leading roles,

Little Stories for Bedtime

Mrs, Grouse Is Once More a Prisoner.

When Farmer Brown's boy heard a faint tap, tap, almost under his feet down in the Green Forest, where he had followed Peter Rabbit, he had guessed right away who it might be who was in trouble under the icy snow crust. He knew that Mrs. Grouse often sleeps on the ground under the snow He knew that when he went to bed the That Madame, the mysterious Lady night before there had been no hard, icy crust over everything, and that when he had awakened in the morning there had been. So Jack Frost must have made it in the night, and, of course, if Mrs. Grouse had been sleeping away down under the snow she would have known nothing about what Jack Frost had been doing until too So Farmer Brown's boy was all ready to see a big brown bird burst out of the snow with a great whirr of wings as soon as he broke throug crust and go speeding off into the depths of the Green Forest.

But nothing of the kind happened. of pure lyric in the upper register and No, sir; nothing of the kind happened. Farmer Brown's boy broke the hard, icy crust with his great boots, taking to see Mrs. Grouse taken away. "There work. Another interesting leaf in the great care not to stamp so hard that he would go through and hurt whoever might be underneath, but when the crust was broken nothing happened for a minute or two. Then there was just a little fluttering of brown wings. Farmer Brown's boy stooped swiftly and lifted away the pieces of broken snow crust, and there lay poor Mrs. Grouse doing her best to make her usually stout, strong wings lift her and carry her away. But all they could do was to flutter helplessly. You see, poor Mrs. Grouse had been kept a prisoner so long under the crust with nothing to eat, she had been so sure that it would be nothing bad. terribly frightened at the thought that she might never be able to get out, and she had struggled so trying to break through that dreadful icy crust that she was all worn out and so weak that now she was quite helpless.

Poor, poor Mrs. Grouse! It seemed to her that she had escaped one danger only to find herself in another danger quite as great. You know, she was like most of the other little people of the 3reen Forest and the Green Mead ows-terribly afraid of Farmer Brown's boy. Hadn't he hunted her time and time again with his terrible gun? And now here he was stooping over her, and she hadn't strength enough to run, let alone fly! It was dreadful! She bravely pecked at the big hand stretched out to take her up, but it was a very feeble peck, and Farmer Brown's boy just laughed. He didn't mind it at all. Then she closed her eyes and shivered as she felt herself lifted out of the snow. That shiver was partly cold and partly fright. You see food is what makes warmth in the body, and thick clothes simply keep that warmth in. So when there is no food to make warmth the body grows cold no matter how thick a coat covers it. So Mrs. Grouse was very,

When she was lifted up Mrs. Grouse expected something terrible to happen. stead she began to feel very comfortable. That hand she had been so afraid of was somehow very warm, and anuntil at last she wasn't afraid at all any more. It was very strange, but she wasn't. She was a prisoner and was being Forest, and yet she wasn't afraid. In-
