Worried: I gladly repeat my wrinkle banishing home treatment, which all my friends have proven perfect. In 1/2 pint water stir 1 ounce almond, then add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. Let this emulsion stand until thoroughly dissolved, then apply to the skin at night as a massage in wall. Allow this to remain on overnight and in the morning wash off and apply more of the jelly-cream. Persisting in this simple treatment will give you a smooth, velvety skin free from lines, and your complexion troubles will be at an end.

Emma L.: Your constant tired "worn-out" feeling is a positive indication of impurities in the blood and an upset liver. Follow the following course of the karden treatment, made as follows: Into 1/2 pint alcohol (never use whisky) put 1 ounce karden. Then add 1/2 cupful sugar and enough hot water to make a full quart. Take a tablespoonful before each meal. The tonic gently expels poisons from blood and restores full health and strength by building up the worn-out parts. Nothing equals the karden tonic for removing foreign particles and to banish eye strain, inflammation and kidney disturbances.

Mary B.: For your dry, itchy scalp would recommend an occasional shampoo with castor oil and water (Lucille), then use this hair tonic once a week. In 1/2 pint alcohol put an ounce quinine (from the drug store), then add 1/2 pint water. Dip your fingers in this tonic and massage the scalp and thoroughly into hair roots. This will relieve that uncomfortable itchy sensation, banish dandruff, and soon correct all hair scalp troubles. Your hair will then become soft, silky and of a rich, even shade.

to the plain fritter batter an extra egg and extra sugar, the grated peel of one orange and half a cupful of candied orange peel. This should be served with a hot orange sauce made from the juice and peel of another orange, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one cupful of sugar and one tablespoonful of corn starch. The sugar, butter and corn starch should be thoroughly blended, the grated peel added with one cupful of boiling water. Cook until it is clear and then turn in the strained juice of the orange. When this is slightly cold add to it a cupful of thick, rich cream which has been whipped dry, and serve with the fritters.

Fabric Buckles. Buckles continue to simulate some usefulness in midday's costume, judging by the way they persistently cling to bodice, skirt and even the coat. Especially popular as a finish to gowns and wraps of all kinds of materials are buckles covered with the same fabric. These buckle frames in various sizes may be bought for 15 cents apiece.

Sash Ends. In a store which is particularly up to date in its trimming department, I saw a line of sash-end ornaments which were luxuriously rich and barbaric. Beadery, tassels and every kind of oddly unexpected consortment of material and color which could be interwoven formed these elaborate bedeckments. As a rule but a single such ornament appears upon a garment and in its placing consists the supreme art which rounds out the perfection of the gown or wrap.

Good Housekeeper Item. The Good Housekeeper has many odd and practical hints which I believe to be original with her. For instance, the other day she was frying onions—one of the seldom-acknowledged misdirections of most families are fried onions—and when the fat in which they were cooked became too oily, she took from a convenient drawer a piece of carefully washed muslin, held it up to the oil and the excess fat. She keeps a quantity of clean linen and cotton cloths, which she never allows to go to a laundry lest some of the washing preparation be used in cleaning them, and she finds many ways of using these tiny "guess towels."

In Fashion's Domain. Black tulle is a pretty touch on any color. The sleeveless jacket is growing in favor. White continues among the smart colors. Three-piece suits of taffeta are the latest. The suede glove is superseding the silk glove. Girdles and sashes are still an important item. Spring gowns made of black silks are fashionable. Parasols of white moire have a black satin border. The new skirts still preserve the peg-top silhouette. We still have the long sleeve of transparent material. Serges of brilliant coloring will be fashionable this spring. Colored tulle, when being combined with the corsage bouffant. The medic collar is among the modes that have survived. Many taffetas are seen in low-necked, short-sleeved gowns. The new costumes show hip puffings and draped open skirts. The tailored suit is given to flare effects both in the corsage and skirt. Many of the fashionably draped turbans are made of white moire. Bustle-back skirts are noticed among the suits for young women. Flowered unites with plain skirts are among the new frocks.

Women Lose Their Vote. Los Angeles, March 26.—County Registrar McAleer ruled that American women married to foreigners previous to 1907 could register and vote. Those married after 1907 are not eligible.

Personal Mention. Activity at Fair Grounds. "Recent progress in mechanical and electrical invention will make the exposition at San Francisco in 1915 the greatest in point of amusement concessions of any previous fair," said Shirley Walker of San Francisco yesterday. Mr. Walker, advertising manager of Sherman, Clay & Co., is in Portland on one of his regular visits to the Portland branch.

Buying unknown scissors or shears is buying a cat in a bag. Hundreds of visitors visit the grounds daily and a number of concessionaires are thinking of opening to please these pre-fair crowds. We are building many new theatres and hotels to accommodate the crowds. Over 350 conventions are already booked for San Francisco during the fair.

Standard Wise Test. A clean trace cut from heel to point through 32 thicknesses of cheese cloth. IF YOU DON'T SEE THIS CUT IT'S ONLY A SKEWER.

Yellowstone and the Grand Canyon and the Yosemite route. "Many, too no doubt will make the complete circle. At any event, Portland hotel men and merchants may be assured of thousands of visitors in 1914."

Canadian Official Here. J. N. Griev, formerly a member of the Canadian parliament from the county of Perth, province of Ontario, and for 29 years an agent of immigration for the Canadian government, is in Portland at the Perkins on business connected with his office in that city. He plans to remain in this city for several days. His district comprises the entire Pacific coast of Canada.

Business property is as valuable as it ever was and this value is substantial," said Mr. Griev. "However, during the boom days now past, additions were made to the cities, and sold for prices far beyond their actual value. I might say that people went land crazy for a time. Business property is as valuable as it ever was and this value is substantial."

Japanese Studies Forestry. Dr. Zentaro Kawase, professor in forestry at the Imperial university, Tokio, Japan, is a Portland visitor at the interest of his science. Starting out almost a year ago to study forestry methods of the world, he is now on the last leg of a journey, embracing China and other Asiatic countries as well as Russia, Germany, Norway, England and other European nations and the United States. He was at the interest of the United States forest service in the Beck building most of today, and expects to study first hand conditions in the big tree forests of Tillamook the first of April he will go to San Francisco to sail for home. He is stopping at the Multnomah hotel.

A. E. Adelsperger, formerly mayor of Marshfield and a practicing attorney, is in Portland today. At the Imperial he said the business and other conditions in Coos county, and with the completion of the railroad into the district the section would come rapidly to the front. Big harbor improvements are projected and when the fact that Marshfield will be the site of a big city within a few years.

THE PERSONAL NOTE. By Jessie Roberts. The Shop-talk club had a jubilee meeting last Saturday to celebrate Edith's promotion. She is now head stenographer, with a delightful increased salary. Her firm is a large importing house, and there's not a doubt that she'll be manager of a big department in another year or so. She has passed.

And do you know what's done it, girls?" asked Rose "Personally," she said, "I don't know. Perhaps it's because I'm a positive genius for making a friend of any one with whom she comes into business relation. People remember her, and she them. When she's taking notes, she knows her man, so to speak. She remembers what gets on his nerves, what he's apt to overlook, what are his favorite expressions. She doesn't ask the wrong questions. She makes him feel that she is personally interested in his special point of view. And he likes it."

"Oh rats," this from Edith. "No, it's true," asserted May. "And it's a good tip. The personal note is a note worth striking. People are human beings in business as well as out of it. If you ignore personalities you are going to be disliked, and if you are disliked you will find it a lot harder to get ahead. This doesn't mean that you should work the social stunt. In business stick to business. At the same time hang over the human element. People remember peculiarities, preferences. Show that you are personally interested in the success of those with whom you work. Don't be afraid to rejoice at a piece of good fortune that affects a business associate though it has no relation to you. And let your own personality show through your work. We all have our own special and naturally mean, Malsy. Should you show that?"

Grandfather Frog Is Heard From. Where was Grandfather Frog? Jerry Muskrat didn't know. Billy Mink didn't know. Little Joe Otter didn't know. Spotty the Turtle didn't know. What is more, not one of them seemed to care. They were so busy with their own affairs that they couldn't waste time thinking about Grandfather Frog. At least, that is what they said whenever Peter Rabbit asked them about him. But to Peter the Smiling Pool didn't seem quite natural without Grandfather Frog. No, sir, it didn't seem quite natural. Every day Peter visited it to see if there was any news of Grandfather Frog. The fact is, Peter was beginning to be worried. What if something had happened to Grandfather Frog? Who would tell him stories, then?

"It's very strange," thought Peter. "Business Spring has come to stay for the children and grandchildren of Sticky-toe the Tree-Toad, were singing their loudest, and this is one of the surest signs that business is coming back for good. Peter knew that they had come out of the mud where they had slept away the winter, and he wondered if Grandfather Frog was for it was in the mud of the Smiling Pool that he had gone to bed after bidding Peter good-by in the fall. He just ached all over to see him, but they were so shy that he never could see one of them. No, sir, look as he would, he never could see one of them. Peter remembered an old saying of his mother's when he was very little fellow and asked too many questions. She would say: "Children should be seen, but not the heard." But that was not the way the Hylas had been brought up. They evidently believed that they should be heard, but not seen. So while Peter could hear their voices coming right out of the Smiling Pool on every side he could never catch so much as a glimpse of one of them, though he nearly looked his eyes out. And, of course, it was foolish to ask questions of people you couldn't see.

"The old fellow has overslept, I guess. Perhaps Mistress Spring has forgotten him. It would serve the lazy old chap right," said Billy Mink, who is not always respectful to his elders. "Oh, you don't really think that, do you?" cried Peter, quite upset at the mere thought of such a thing. "Shouldn't wonder," replied Billy Mink, winking at Jerry Muskrat. "Probably she thinks he is getting so old that it isn't worth while to wake him. I wouldn't blame her if she didn't."

"Oh, Billy!" cried Peter. "I—I—I really thought she had forgotten I'd go remind her." "Why don't you?" retorted Billy Mink, once more winking at Jerry Muskrat. You know Billy is a great mischief maker and dearly loves to get other people into trouble. "She might not like it," replied Peter, looking very thoughtful. "She might think that I was trying to meddle in her affairs. Still, I can't bear to think that Grandfather Frog has been forgotten. Why, what would the Smiling Pool do without him, I'd like to know."

"It would do very well," replied Billy Mink. "Of what use is an old fellow who thinks he knows all that is to be known, like Grandfather Frog? He's a nuisance."

"Chugarum!" exclaimed a great, deep, gruff voice, and it sounded indeed, very indignant, indeed. Peter Rabbit looked eagerly across the Smiling Pool. There on the end of Jerry Muskrat's old log sat Grandfather Frog, for there was no big green hilly-pod for him to sit on yet.

"Oh, Grandfather Frog, I'm so glad you've waked up!" cried Peter. "Chugarum!" replied Grandfather Frog. "What were you about to say, Billy Mink?" But Billy Mink was nowhere to be seen.

New Flag Station. Salem, Or., March 26.—The railroad commission has ordered the Oregon Electric to put in a flag station between Metzger and Nesmith. Four trains each way will be subject to flagging. This action was taken on complaint of J. W. Buckley.

Half and Half. From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Apropos of the mismanagement of a railroad that had gone into a receiver's hands, a certain prominent railroad man said: "The calm and bland excuses offered for their mismanagement by the road's various heads remind me of Smith."

Smith last Sabbath put in a strenuous day cleaning up his garden for the spring planting. "Look here, Smith, do you think I want all your tin cans and bones and old shoes thrown over into my garden?"

"You haven't got 'em all, old man. You've only got half," said Smith, calmly. "Brown on the other side, got the other half."

AT LAST, NO MORE BLUE MONDAYS FOR PA. By Edna K. Wooley. A JENKINS sat down, unfolded his napkin and looked critically at the chicken-and-noodle left-overs from the luncheon provided by his her automatic washlady.

"Pa hates washday, and for years has tried to persuade me that a laundry could do all the work for less money and with less bother. But ma adhered to a round Hungarian person with a taste for chicken and porkhouse steak. 'I like to see how my washing is done,' says ma. 'You can't trust those laundries.'"

"Well, how did things go today?" mildly queried pa, deftly winding a long noodle on his fork. "Pa Jenkins," quoth ma in a tone where reproach and accusation mingled, "why didn't you tell me you'd all that money in that old mattress?"
