MADAME ISE'BELL'S BEAUTY LESSON

LESSON I.
The Care of the Skin.
The most attractive feature in feminine beauty lies in the texture and color of the skin, and a beautiful complexion will redeem almost any other fault in the face. The infant's undeveloped features have no beauty—time and character have not yet stamped expression on the face, but the soft tints of the skin are exquisite. In the young girl the strongest appeal lies in the delicacy of her coloring, and a mature woman without a clear, unclouded skin is sadly handicapped.

Every woman desires a nice complexion beyond anything else, and every woman should possess it. I do not believe in the necessity for yellow discolorations, premature wrinkles, roughness and eruptions. Nine-tenths of these come from improper treatment or lack of care, the rest from ill health, discontent and worry; they can all be avoided and in a large measure overcome.

Care of the Child.
Few women take proper care of their skin and this abuse dates from childhood. I paid a visit to what seemed an ideally appointed nursery. The mother, a college trained woman, married to a man of wealth, was able to give her three little girls every advantage that science and means could afford. They were under the charge of a trained nurse, who seemed to take perfect care of them in every respect, save that she did not know how to wash their faces.

How I longed to interfere when I saw her scrub each face vigorously with a square of rough toweling, rubbing their faces downward and drying them in the same manner, without thoroughly rinsing away the soap she had too lavishly used. What was wrong? Why to my mind, everything was wrong—the cloth, the soap, the manner in which they were used, and the lack of proper rinsing.

Keep the Face Clean.
This is my rule for washing the face of a young child. During infancy nothing rougher than absorbent cotton should touch the face; as the skin thickens, a square of soft linen is better, as it offers more resistance. The cloth should be absolutely clean, that is, it should be washed in boiling water after each using. Babies need no soap on the face; when the children get to the grimy age soap may occasionally be necessary, but it should not be applied directly to the face or to the washing. Instead make a strong lather of soap, dilute it until it is lukewarm, and wash the face, gently, but thoroughly, with this.

Follow this with a thorough rinsing, first with lukewarm and then with cold water, until there is no trace of soap on the skin. Then wipe the face with a series of gentle pats, never rub, to give the skin downward, but always upward and across. In fact, never rub the skin at all, simply pat it dry.

Washed in this way, the skin is perfectly clean, every particle of soap removed, the touch of cold water has hardened it against contact with the air, and it has not been stretched or made coarse by hard treatment.

Delicacy of the Human Skin.
There is no substance known so delicate as the human skin; it is elastic to a great degree, capable of absorbing by means of the exterior surface and the capillaries that nourish it; it is keenly sensitive to heat or cold, and it should, in short, have the greatest possible care. But, on the contrary, it is generally very roughly treated. A woman will spend hours washing and drying a delicate piece of embroidery or lace, or, fearing to trust her own skill, she will send it to a professional cleaner, but she will give half a minute to washing her child's face, using strong soap and a rough cloth as aids, and a few years later, wonder why the child has not a good complexion.

Effect of Soap on the Skin.
I am not a great believer in soap, but it is difficult to induce busy mothers to entirely discard it. Be sure to get an absolutely pure soap—it need not be the most expensive on the market—and then bear in mind that even the pure soap there is some free alkali present. That is why I lay emphasis on the necessity of thoroughly rinsing the face after soap has been used.

Remember Peter Rabbit.
Surely no one was ever in a tighter place than was Peter Rabbit when Reddy Fox chased him under the brush pile in the Green Forest and then Old Man Coyote and Granny Fox and Reddy Fox and Redtail the Hawk watched all the rest of the long day for him to come out. He couldn't stay there forever, because, you know, there was nothing to eat and Peter, like most folks, just has to eat. But Peter has a great deal of wisdom in his funny little head, even if he does sometimes do very foolish things, and one of the wisest things that Peter does is never to give up hope. No matter how bad things may look for him, Peter always feels sure that he will find a way out, and that, you know, is the very best way in the world to look at things.

So when Peter crawled under that pile of brush and so escaped Reddy Fox his first thought was one of thankfulness. He didn't know how he was ever going to get back to the dear Old Briar Patch, but he was safe so long as he stayed where he was, and he was very thankful for that. As he squatted there panting for breath, for he had quite lost it in dodging Reddy Fox, he heard Old Man Coyote, Reddy and Granny Fox, and Redtail the Hawk planning how they would

How Peter Rabbit Got Away.
When you're in trouble don't give up—Despair's a foolish habit. Make up your mind there's some way out.

Why Not Dance At Home?

The CAROLA INNER-PLAYER

is the best substitute for an Orchestra. Indeed, it is to be preferred, unless the orchestra has more than twelve pieces, for with the CAROLA INNER-PLAYER you can instantly obtain any degree of power over the entire range of the piano, from its singing treble to the warm cello-like tones of the bass.

With its wealth of power and color, and the technique of the trained pianist, it enables those who dance to feel, as well as hear, the rhythmic accents of the music.

And How Inexpensive!

Most homes have, or look forward to having a piano. Do you realize that for twelve more monthly payments, or four more quarterly payments, you can bring into your home not only this exceptionally fine piano, but its Magic Musician as well?

It is not only an unusually beautiful piano to be played by hand, but an instrument supreme among Player-Pianos—the Player which does not sound mechanical.

Free demonstrations of this instrument every day. If it is not possible to call, write for our complete illustrated art catalogue.
