DESCRIBES COLORADO AND MEXICAN EVENTS

Reed Contributes Interesting Magazine Articles on What He Saw and Heard.

THE TRAGEDY AT LUDLOW

Shooting of men and burning of women and children at Ludlow

John Reed, formerly of Portland, contributed two articles to the July Metropolitan dealing with the Colorado strike war and the other being the fourth installment of Mr. Reed's pen picture of General Villa on the march.

The Colorado article states what the miners really make in wages, the means by which imported strike-breakers were secured and methods used by the militia in disbanding a woman's parade. Describing the attack on the Ludlow tent colony, Mr. Reed says:

"Early that morning an armored train was made up in Trinidad, and 128 militiamen of Troop A got on board. But the trainmen refused to take them and it was not until 2 o'clock in the afternoon that they finally found a crew to man the train. They got to Ludlow about 3 o'clock, and added their two machine guns to the terrible fire poured unceasingly into the tent colony. One detachment 'blowed' above the strike out of their position in the arroyo, and another attempted in vain to dislodge those in the millinery."

When the fire started Mrs. Jolly went from tent to tent, pulling the women and children out of the cellars and herding them before her out on the plain. She remembered all of a sudden that Mrs. Petrucci and her three children were in the cellar under her tent, and started back to get them out. "No," said Tikas, "you go ahead with that bunch. I'll go back after the Petruccis." And he started toward the flames.

"There the militia captured him. He tried to explain his errand; but they were drunk with blood lust and would not listen to him. Lieutenant Linderfelt broke the stock of his rifle over the Greek's head, laying it open to the bone. Fifty men got a rope and threw it over a telegraph wire to hang him. But Linderfelt critically handed him over to two militiamen and told them they were responsible for his life. Five minutes later Louis Tikas fell dead with three bullets in his back; and out of Mrs. Petrucci's cellar were afterward taken the charred bodies of 12 women and children."

"Que desca, amiga? What do you want?" said Villa, sitting on the end of the bunk in blue underclothes. The troops who lounged around the place lazily made way for me.

"I want a horse, mi general."

"Car-r-r-i-i, our friend here wants a horse?" cried a sergeant sarcastically, amid a burst of laughter from the others. "Why, you correspondents will be wanting an automobile next. Oyea, Sante Reporter, do you know that about a thousand men in my army have no horses? What do you want a horse for? Here's the train."

"So I can ride with the advance?"

"No," he smiled. "There are too many balloons—too many bullets flying in the advance."

"He was hurrying into his clothes as he talked and gulped coffee from the side of a dirty tin coffee pot. Somebody handed him his gold-handled sword."

"No," he said contemptuously. "This is going to be a fight not a parade. Give me my rifle!"

"He stood at the door of his cabin, rifle in hand, for a moment, thoughtfully looking at the long lines of mounted men, picturesque in the crossed cartridge belts and varied equipment. Then he gave a few quick orders and mounted his big stallion."

Improving the Road.

Woodland, Wash., June 27.—Motorists and taxpayers are to be pleased to know that the bad stretch of road between Woodland and La Center on the Pacific highway will in all probability be ready for travel by fall. J. T. Carter, the contractor, now has 50 teams and about 100 men at work on the road. This piece of road, only six miles in length, was one of the worst pieces between Portland and Seattle, and the elimination of the hills, reducing the grade to not over 5 per cent, will make it one of the best heretofore. It has only been passable during the dry part of the year.
