

LEGLESS NEWSBOY IS OUT TO WIN TRIP TO WORLD BALL SERIES

Eastern Publication Offers Trip Free to 17 Who Sell Largest Number of Papers.

Joe Hartly, legless "newsboy," is out to win the honor of attending the world's baseball series this season. "Joe," who has a host of friends, is familiarly known to hundreds of Portlanders, and from his post at the corner of Broadway and Washington streets he daily supplies his customers.

"If friends count for anything, I ought to be selected as one of the men to see the world series," he said. "The agents who sell the most copies of the Saturday Evening Post from June 4 to Sept. 5, inclusive, will win this coveted prize, which will mean free trips for 17 sub-agents."

Scores of well wishers have thrown their support to Joe and his chances of being in on the winning list appear to be bright. He is an ardent fan and his genial nature and pleasant smile have endeared him to a wide circle of people. Business men and professional men and breadwinners alike are among Joe's patrons.

Up to date Joe stands sixth on the list in the first class with a rating of over 100. The winners will have all their expenses paid for the round trip and each will be entitled to take along it, they may have $100 in gold and remain at home. In the event that Hartly wins he will be accompanied by his wife.

Will Ask Congress for Fire Protection

Oregon Delegation Takes Up Matter of Southern Pacific Land Grant Now Under Litigation; Homes Imperilled.

(Washington Bureau of The Journal.) Washington, June 29.—The Oregon delegation in congress is trying to find some way to protect the vast areas of forest lands which have been in litigation between the government and the railroad. The latter took precautions to protect these lands from fires, but now that the courts have decided adversely to the railroad the latter are not likely to consider it good policy to pay out money for this purpose even though they may appeal their case. Senator Chamberlain submitted the question to the secretary of the interior, asking him whether the department could not spare some money for a fire patrol. The secretary replied as follows:

"I have your letters of June 15 and June 17, with reference to the Oregon & California railroad grant, in which you say means of protection should be taken against fire during the summer. This land, as you know, does not belong to the United States, that is to say, its title must remain in doubt until the litigation is ended. Can you advise me how it has been protected in the past and whether it can be protected in the same way in the future? We have no money with which this work can be done. I heartily endorse the suggestion to patrol these lands for the purpose of fire protection, but inasmuch as the title is not in the government and we are without the necessary funds, I do not see how the action desired can be taken. No doubt if congress were to provide the means, we could make arrangements with the railroad people to permit us to go upon the land and patrol it."

Not only the government lands, but many farms, homesteads and even villages are subject to danger from forest fires. It is estimated that $25,000 would pay for fire patrol and guards for the coming year. Senators Lane and Chamberlain will try to get an appropriation allowed for this purpose, and Representatives Sinnott and Hawley will try to do the same thing in the house. The case is considered sufficiently urgent to warrant congress in making a special appropriation, even in the face of the general demands for economy in national expenditures.

Three Oregonians Win Homesteads

Patents to Claims Secured Through the Efforts of Representative Hawley of Oregon's First District.

(Washington Bureau of The Journal.) Washington, June 30.—Through the efforts of Representative Hawley three Oregonians who had their homestead claims contested have finally secured patents.

Charles H. Bradshaw of Newport was one of the original Siletz entrymen. While he lived on the land his wife ran a photograph gallery in Newport and contributed the cash for the family support. The interior department questioned the good faith of this entryman and held the claim for cancellation, but through the interposition of the representative, Bradshaw was allowed to make another homestead entry and now he has proved up and a patent has been issued.

Mrs. Mary A. Baker, a widow with two children, took up a homestead in Jackson county near Butte Falls. She put the children in school some distance from her homestead and was absent part of the time, but when school was not in session she lived on her claim. The forest service contested her entry. She appealed to Representative Hawley, through whose efforts she secured her patent.

Mrs. Sarah J. Freeman had a claim near Waldo, Josephine county. Her husband made the original entry, but died before the residence period expired. She submitted her proof first under the five year homestead act and it was held that she must submit proof under the new act which requires cultivation. On account of her physical inability to make the clearing required the department restricted the area required to be cultivated and granted her a patent.

Duke Is Sued for $8,000,000. New York, June 30.—James B. Duke, the tobacco magnate, is sued to compel him to keep an alleged agreement to put $8,000,000 into a fertilizer company.

Prosperity in San Francisco. San Francisco, June 30.—Fifteen hundred local business men took part in a prosperity banquet in the ferry building.

Writing Out of Tune
—It is a pity when an advertising man is writing out of tune.
—By that we mean writing things about goods when the goods themselves are saying something entirely contradictory.
—This thought has struck us time and again as we investigated recent sales.
—We have no concern with the unlimited amount of "BEST" and "VERY BEST" and "LARGEST" and "GREATEST" assortments and bargains except that it makes one feel that somebody must be writing out of tune.
—What we want to say is that we are sincerely trying to tell you nothing in our store news that cannot be substantiated.
