Dowdy Women-Well Dressed Men.

London, June 29 .- In the cities of the United States shop windows are given over to the ladies. Broadly speakingand upon the authority of a lady versed in such things one can see more and better fashion in half an hour's window shopping in New York than in all of London. Even to the eye uneducated in chiffons it is obvious that the London woman dresses principally as a protection against the weather. In a day of narrow skirts most of them wear full petticoats. saw seven slit skirts today." said the feminine authority quoted above. "Each got out of a private automobile on Regent street."

To own a private automobile means untold wealth in London. One must pay a tax ranging from $210 a year on a 60 horsepower machine downward. Further, for each male servant in liva tax of 15 shillings is assessed. while armorial bearings on the door of the carriage cost $10 more annually. It is assumed, then, that the seven slit skirt wearers belonged to the higher circles.

And I saw through the slits in the skirts," said my authority, triumph-"that each woman wore woolen stockings."

Their hats are stern and uncompromising. Queen Mary Wears mere head coverings. No doubt her bonnets cost enough. But there isn't a shopgirl on Fifth avenue who would wear one sewed it up differently.
