

MINISTERS ASKED TO PREACH SERMON ON 'BACK TO THE HOME'

Oregon Hygiene Society Promotes Movement to Draw Children from the Streets.

AMUSEMENTS SUGGESTED

Material Will be Provided to Assist Pastors in Preparation of Sermons.

Ministers have been asked by W. F. Woodward, chairman of the public education committee of the Oregon Social Hygiene society, to help the "Back to the Home" movement. He has sent a letter to each of the city asking him to preach a "Back to the Home" sermon some time during July. This letter reads:

"The Oregon Social Hygiene society has decided to promote a 'Back to the Home' movement, in an effort to exalt the home and make it more attractive to children in the evening than the various diversions on the streets. The plan contemplates the co-operation of the ministry, the press, parent-teacher associations, and other agencies; the enforcement of the curfew ordinance only when other means fail.

Material for Sermons.

"Will you join other ministers in devoting a sermon some Sunday in July, calling attention to the need of a greater parental responsibility in this regard, and especially giving some definite suggestions how the home ties made to bind children stronger upon the children? We believe that many parents are striving earnestly to know better how the situation can be met and will readily welcome any helpful suggestions.

"Perhaps certain material in our hands describing surveys made of children on the streets at night, their frequency of attendance upon moving picture shows, conditions in parks and playgrounds, opinions of citizens prominent in public life, may serve you as a basis for the preparation of such a sermon."

Suggestions for Home.

A list of suggestions on how to make the home more attractive to children has been prepared by the committee. Some of them are:

"In building a home better begin with a large yard and a small house—and remember that a small yard is better than none.

"Let the yard be for play as well as for beauty and ornament.

"Swings, teter-boards, rings, bars, sand-boxes, have the drawing power of magnets for small children.

"A shack though rudely constructed, will serve as a fort or an Indian cave. Let the boys make the shack themselves.

"A sewing cabinet may crowd things more objectionable out of a girl's life and may be a 'stitch in time' in her behalf.

Children's Library Recommended.

"A work bench in the basement may be the cause of developing a world-famed architect—or add much to happiness, usefulness and health of a plain man.

"A bird house will early lead both girls and boys to cultivate the friendship of their feathered friends. The boys themselves can make the bird houses.

"A child's library has many attractions for winter evenings. Competent sources are at the parents' command to aid in selecting these books that boys and girls would read. For lists write to the state library commission, Salem, or enquire at the child department, Portland public library.

"With little children, a mother can read from some interesting but not too exciting book for a half hour after they are in bed, to their life-long advantage.

"There is too much open house now—but with the children at outside evening attractions. Where are the old-fashioned parties and hospitality which marked the open house of years past?"

Train Robbers in Missouri Escape

Express Company Claims Men Who Blew Open Safe on Katy Flier Got About $1000 in Jewelry, No Money.

St. Louis, July 10.—The valuables secured by the bandits who held up a "Katy" passenger train near Matsoo, Mo., Thursday night, was estimated today all the way from $1000 to $50,000.

General Agent Brown of the American Express company's office here declared the express safe the outlaws dynamited contained no money and that the jewelry the bandits got was worth not more than $1000. Trainmen, however, said he put the figure entirely too low, though they disagreed as to just what it should be.

The robbers, four in number, masked and heavily armed, climbed on board the blind baggage at the Matson water tank about 40 miles from St. Louis, and clambering over the tender, held up Engineer John Schnabel and his fireman and kept the rest of the train crew and passengers inside the cars by firing frequently along either side of the train.

The engine and baggage, express and mail cars were detached from the train and the trainmen covered, the other two blew open the safe, helped themselves to its contents and disappeared in the brush.

Two Found Lying In Pool of Blood

Woman is Dead and Man Badly Wounded, Tells Conflicting Stories of Tragedy in Lodging House.

Washington, July 10.—Lying in a pool of blood with two pistols on the floor nearby, William Poland, aged 38, and Mrs. Lulu Naylor, 25, were found today in a room in the Anacostia boarding house, the former badly wounded and the latter dead.

Poland denied that he did the shooting but his stories conflicted. First he said the "landlady did it." Then he declared it was the woman's husband who had two bullets in the abdomen but doctors said he might recover.

Husband Charges Was "Henpecked"

Charles Herman Eckelman Says Wife Failed to Keep House and Was Devoting Time to Society.

The "original Mr. Henpeck" seems to have been found in Charles Herman Eckelman, if allegations made by him in a divorce suit filed Wednesday are proven when the case is tried. For years, he says, it has been his custom to sweep the house each Saturday afternoon because Marjorie L. Eckelman, his wife, failed to keep the place clean.

He charges her with feeling superfluous to him and with spending so much time at social affairs, including numerous clubs, that she had little time to devote to her home. He alleges that she was very fond of his mother before their marriage in Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 10, 1906, and with having a very opposite feeling after the ceremony.

He alleges that he spent at least five out of seven nights at home year after year and that on such occasions he would keep aloof and would not hold communication with him. They have two children. He charges her with deserting him Oct. 7, 1910.

MEETING OF COMMON TERMINAL COMMITTEE IS NOT ASKED AS YET

City Atty. La Roche Has Not Had Time to Examine the Resolution.

FORESHORE IS AT ISSUE

Question Would Be Settled If People Adopt Tide Lands Measure, Which Will Go on the Ballot.

City Attorney La Roche said this morning that despite contrary report, he had not asked for a meeting of the common terminal committee with Commissioner Dieck to define exactly what is wanted of him in connection with the Dieck resolution calls upon the council at its meeting last Wednesday. He has not as yet, he said, had time that he could use in examining the resolution and learning exactly what is required of him. Neither was he consulted in the drafting of it. Apparently the resolution calls upon the city attorney to determine whether title to the foreshore between high and low water marks rests in the upland owner or the public. This question was settled in favor of the upland owner by the supreme court over a year ago in the Pacific Milling & Elevator case. There is a question about the foreshore between the low water mark and the harbor line, the supreme court decision conceding here the superior public right in respect to navigation. In developing a common terminal in accordance with the common terminal amendment the establishing of this right has its importance.

But all questions of public right will be settled if the people adopt the tide lands measure which will be on the ballot at the November election. One of them is the proposed constitutional amendment making beds of navigable waters of the state inalienable and subject to public use for water commerce, and authorizing cities to construct docks thereon or the leasing thereof upon fair rental value to be paid for the joint benefit of the cities and the common school fund. The second is a proposed initiative law authorizing cities to construct docks on state lands. The passage of these measures will settle forever the public right to own, control and use the overflow lands or foreshore, all of which is now denied because there is no constitutional provision or statute governing the situation.

Orange Grower Is Killed By Belt

While Trying to Start Power Pumping Plant Near Pomona J. L. Minnick Is Dragged Into the Machinery.

Pomona, Cal., July 10.—J. L. Minnick, a prominent orange grower, was killed early today when he attempted to start an electric power pumping plant. It is believed his clothing caught in the foot-wide belt.

A terrific crash as the huge motor was wrenched from its cement foundation woke the family and the daughter, rushing out, found her father lying unconscious with one arm practically torn from the body. He died shortly afterward.

Drowned in Columbia Slough.

Fred Metzler of Los Angeles, attending the Apostolic Faith campmeeting, was drowned yesterday evening in the Columbia slough. He waded into deep water. A widow and two children survive him in Los Angeles. The body has not been recovered.
