Gearhart is very much alive with the usual sea shore visitors, augmented by 2500 men in the uniform of the United States army, guardsmen and regulars, who flock from place to place about the town and hotel and seashore. The boarded up windows and closed doors have all been opened, and on the once deserted porches have appearances of at home, for chairs, bles, rugs and many other little things portray to all the fact that we are now at the seashore home.
