Have The Journal sent to your Summer address.

Court Annuls Marriage. — Circuit Judge Gatens has annulled the marriage of Zelda Clopton and W. W. Clopton in a suit brought by Mrs. Dorothy Bragdon, mother of Mrs. Clopton. Mrs. Clopton was not of age when she and Clopton eloped to Vancouver, Wash., March 23, and had not the consent of her parents. She is but 17 years old. Clopton first started suit to recover heirlooms he alleged he had given to his wife, but the suit was later withdrawn. Mrs. Clopton was allowed to resume her maiden name, Zelda Bragdon. The Cloptons lived together but one week after the marriage.

How to Keep Cool—On a hot summer afternoon when you become warm and tired from shopping, you should go to the Columbia Theatre and enjoy an hour in rest and recreation. This is the coolest theatre in the city. Only the best photo-play productions are offered. Every courtesy is extended to patrons. (Adv.)

Funeral of Mrs. Nancy Caples.—The funeral of Mrs. Nancy Caples, aged 84, a member of a well known pioneer family, who died Friday afternoon at St. Vincent's hospital, was held Sunday afternoon from the Methodist Episcopal church at St. Johns. Rev. C. C. Poling, pastor of the First United Evangelical church, officiated. Interment was in Lone Fir cemetery. Mrs. Caples, who was 84 years of age at the time of her death, resided at 509 Willamette boulevard, St. Johns.

Blames Company for Accident.—While at the warehouse of the Oregon Road Oiling company inspecting an auto truck which he contemplated purchasing, J. G. Hammer fell into an elevator hole and sustained a broken rib which pierced his lungs causing pneumonia, Hammer alleges in a suit for $10,090 damages filed yesterday against the company. Failure to safeguard the pit is alleged. The accident occurred May 2, 1913.

Son Calls for Missing Father.—Desperate efforts are being made by relatives to find George H. Baker, formerly of Elgin, Or., but last heard of at North Bend. Baker's father is seriously ill at Elgin and continually calls for his missing son. His present whereabouts are unknown, but he is urgently requested to come home at once while his family will appreciate any information that will lead to finding the man.

Business Active at Market.—A dozen farmers completely sold out their wares by 11 o'clock this morning at the central east side public market, East Sixth and East Alder streets. Wilson Benefiel, a member of the East Side Business Men's club committee in charge, stated that more produce could have been sold this morning if brought to the market. Spring chickens sold at 30 cents each.

Hatless and Penniless.—Ella Marquardt, a 17-year-old girl, picked up Thursday morning at 1 o'clock by the police, is being held by the department of safety until her parents can be located. The girl says she came from Clackamas county, but refuses to give her parents' address or any information that will lead to their location. She was found on the street without hat or money.

Boys Return Purse.—When M. C. Plank, 533 Belmont street, opened his purse yesterday evening to buy a paper from a newsboy, two other newsboys grabbed the money and ran away. A third "newsie" saw the affair and reported it to the police. The two boys were arrested and taken to the station. They said Plank gave them the purse, but would return it, which they did and were sent home.

Alleges Careless Driving.—Retta Vachal this morning filed suit for $5345 damages against Howard W. Crofts as the result of being struck by Crofts' automobile June 18. She alleges that Crofts drove carelessly without proper lights. With her husband and young son, she asserts, she was walking along the Milwaukie road when the accident occurred.

Verdict for Defendant. — A verdict for the defense was returned this morning in Circuit Judge McGinn's court in the suit of Endre Cederbergh, administrator of the estate of Martin Johnsen, against Hansen & Hanna, contractors, and the Kerry Timber company. Johnsen was killed by a rock from a blast, it was alleged, while working at railroad construction. Damages of $7500 were asked.

Address on Somers System—A. H. Giles, the expert in charge of the Somers' valuation system now being applied to this city, will address the Single Tax Luncheon at Moore's restaurant, Fifth near Morrison St., next Thursday in explanation of this method of comparative valuation of all property included in the terms land and improvements.

Woman Ill; Diamond Gone.—A woman about 35 years old and dressed in a dark tailored suit feigned illness last evening at Park and Jefferson streets, where F. N. Whitney, 293 Tenth street, offered her aid. The woman soon revived and went on her way. Soon after she disappeared Whitney missed his diamond stud valued at $60. It is supposed the woman took it.

All Muts Meet Tomorrow.—All members of the Order of Muts have been instructed by the chief mut, W. P. Strandborg, to attend a meeting at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Ad club rooms at the Hotel Portland, there to receive the obligations of the organization and to prepare to do the things they have to do in the cause of humanity.

Ad Club Delegates to Speak—The men who represented the Ad club at the international advertising convention in Toronto will speak at the club luncheon tomorrow. They were R. D. Carpenter, manager of the Meier & Frank company, chairman of the delegation, and Marshall N. Dana of The Journal. A special musical program is announced.

Picnic at Washington Park.—The Young Peoples' Branch of Central W. C. T. U. invite all young people to attend their picnic at Washington Park tomorrow evening at 6 o'clock. Basket lunch. Mrs. Lillian M. Mitchner, speaker from Kansas, will address the young folks at the dinner hour. A social time will complete the evening.

Herlow Denied New Trial. — E. C. Herlow, convicted on a charge of larceny by bailee of $3500 from Mr. and Mrs. William Grace, was denied a new trial yesterday by Circuit Judge Morrow. A motion for the setting aside of judgment on the ground that he was indicted in February but not tried until May is to be heard.

Sues for $4210 Damages.—Suit for $4210 damages was filed by Harry Mills against the Multnomah Box & Lumber company yesterday. Mills was injured last September, he alleges, while working for the company by falling timber.

Lecture on Prohibition—Paul Turner will debate prohibition at the meeting of the Bonville association in the central library tomorrow evening. Prohibitionists are invited to send a representative to meet Mr. Turner, as he will affirm that it is an injury to the state to establish prohibition.

At the New Grand Theatre, 105 Sixth street, Wednesday, July 22, "A Born Warrior" in three parts; the life story of Napoleon, a story full of action and genuine sensation. "Exiled," in three parts, sequel to "A Born Warrior," to be shown Friday, July 24. Admission 5 cents. (Adv.)

Sues for Divorce.—Suit for divorce was filed this morning by Fannie Lutz against S. A. Lutz. Cruelty is alleged and Mrs. Lutz said that their four children are with him, no mention of the custody of the children being made.

Companies File Articles.—Articles of incorporation of the Frohman Investment company, capitalized at $25,000, were filed with County Clerk Coffey. Edwin J. Frohman, Milton C. Frohman and Anson S. Frohman are the incorporators. Articles of the Rudell Mercantile company, capitalized at $5000, were filed by N. M. Todd, V. C. Rudell and W. F. Todd. Articles of the United Contract company, capitalized at $5000, were filed by Peter Vragnizan, J. C. Beck and C. R. Burt.

ADAM-MAN IS DECLARED TO BE BIG FRAUD

a telephone message that the Knowles camp outfit had hurriedly moved their camp to a spot that is little frequented, known as Kempshaw camp. I went over there. The boys at the camp I had just left thought I had gone over the trail. I stepped on the porch of the Kempshaw camp and found Knowles and his manager smoking cigarettes.

"This was the second week of his test. The public was reading daily stories of how he was stalking through virgin forests and wading through muck in forests without food for three days and stricken with fever that had almost driven him to give it up.

"But here was Knowles in a snug camp, talking over matters with his manager, with a sweater, an old pair of pants, and moccasins on, enjoying his smoke as much as if seated in the Copley plaza where I saw him weeks later, getting the best the land afforded.

Manager Was Excited.

"Just inside the window was a table with a typewriter on it. A bed ran from that to the inner wall. Joe was sitting on a chair with legs crossed, and was as happy and contented as a wealthy sportsman.

"His manager jumped up, excited, and confronted me at the door. Knowles wheeled about and kept his back to me. He was too late, but I hadn't planned or expected the meeting.

"The manager was almost too excited to speak. I passed the manager some tobacco and told him I had been instructed to deliver it."

Then Deming explained how the manager had tried to palm off Knowles as someone else—a friend from Flagstaff, who had come to spend the night with him. Presently, he says, he started away and went up the trail to a spring, where he sat down to rest. After a while he says he saw Knowles coming with an army pack on his back. Knowles hailed Deming and greeted him effusively, later seeking the compact to hire him as guide and to keep secret the fact that he had come into camp when he was supposed to be out naked in the woods.

Bear Pit Is Built.

Allen, the reporter-manager who had been in charge until Deming appeared so unexpectedly, agreed to g ive up on account of "ill health," and the new arrangement went into effect whereby Deming took charge of the camp.

"Knowles told me he had to make a lot of bows and arrows and leantos," Deming's story goes on, "and you'll have to help me. 'I must dig a bear pit to back up that story we sent out last Sunday about trapping a bear. I must get a couple of deer to make moccasins and pants which will look like the real thing when we get back to civilization. We must fool the people, you know, and do it in style.

"'What's the use of doing this thing on the level? Get just as much credit and coin to fake it. Of course I could, you know, but it would be useless. Why suffer? The public likes to be fooled, as old P. T. Barnum said. We'll play them for suckers.'"

Deming says he played in with them and said when Joe declared he "could do it on the level," replied: "Of course you could. But he says he knew better.

Task Believed Impossible.

"I'd like to say right now," Deming declares, "that I don't think any woodsman could do honestly and successfully what Knowles mapped out last fall in the woods of northern Maine."

"Given a knife and a gun, a clever woodsman's chances would be all right, but I don't consider Knowles in that class. It is true he was a guide at King and Bartlett camps, but his experience covered only a few years. He is a clever artist, though."

As for the experiences of the two in the woods together, Deming says he and Knowles went fly fishing the first night they were together and subsequently went many more times. That is the way, Deming says, Knowles says he snared a trout by damming a brook and wading in. Deming says he made Knowles a bow out of ironwood which he hewed with his ax and whittled with his jackknife, later scraping it smooth with a piece of broken glass while Joe smoked peacefully. Deming says Joe often would say:

"The boobs in the city propably are wondering what poor Joe is doing alone in the woods tonight, without a stitch of clothing and without food or tobacco. If they could only see me now. But what the h—, boys, this is the only way to do this stunt. It's more comfortable."

Deming says that when Knowles took his naps he always cautioned him to keep his "eye peeled" so nobody would intrude.

A number of callers appeared, Deming says, but were always seen in time to allow Joe to duck out the back window or hide under the cabin floor. Such intrusions always made Joe ejaculate that he wished people would stay away.

There was not always the highest harmony in the camp, Deming says, the manager protesting at many of the things that Knowles wanted put over for the newspapers. The result of the stories sent out was that it took all kinds of trouble and ingenuity to back them up with evidences of fact.

Joe Disliked Digging.

Birchbark messages sent out to civilization were written with the fine charcoal of the finished artist and not with the stub of a firebrand, according to Deming.

The hardest job of all was in digging the bear pit for a "blind," Deming says. Joe wasn't at all keen for this fashion of making good on the press agent stuff, but his companions forced him to take his turn. They found a pick and shovel at a deserted camp and found a spot where a bear might be expected to lurk. It took two days of the hardest kind of work to get the pit dug, though Knowles told how he had dug it with his bare hands and sharp rocks. The bearskin was bought from a trapper named Hall for $12.

The return to civilization was rather a precipitate and terror-stricken retreat, Deming says, because the bear pit was "seen through" by some newspaper men and trappers who perceived it never could have imprisoned a bear, and this caused quite a chase. Across the mountains on the Canadian side some game wardens were lurking to nab Knowles for violating some forest regulations and there were other complications. So, instead of emerging from the woods at some obscure point, they followed the trail and came into Megantec.

He certainly looked the part of a wild man when he reached the hotel at Megantic, alone, Deming says. He wore the bearskin tunic, deerskin pants and plenty of tan.

The rest of it was merely a matter of ingenious spinning of fairy tales when the questions were put to him. Deming says he prover a past master at the art.

Notice to Water Consumers

July 18, 1914.

Owing to the unprecedented draft on the water system in some sections of the city, due to lawn sprinkling, which has developed a condition wherein it is difficult, in some instances, to secure water for domestic purposes, it has been found necessary to adopt an emergency rule to govern during the heated season.

Beginning Sunday, July 19, 1914, the following rules will govern lawn sprinkling:

All ODD NUMBERED buildings shall sprinkle on ODD DATES, and all EVEN NUMBERED buildings shall sprinkle on EVEN DATES. For example: Buildings numbered 121, 123, 125, etc., will sprinkle on the 19th, 21st, 23d, etc. Buildings numbered 120, 122, 124, etc., will sprinkle on July 20th, 22d, 24th, etc.

The afternoon hours of sprinkling will be limited to the hours of 5:00 P. M. to 12:00 P. M. inclusive. The morning hours for sprinkling will be as in the past, from 5:00 A. M. to 8:00 A. M.

These rules will be strictly enforced.
