Riflemen Send Bullets Into the Sky and Cannon Boar But the Airman Gets Away in Safety.

By William Philip Sims. Paris, Sept. 2 (by mail to New York).-Paris has been through so much that it'seems as if it had got past ever being excited or frightened Drinking grenadine syrups and watching, quite indifferently, the dropping of German bombs upon the city has become a favorite pastime. It is simply something of a borethat's all. At any rate, that is the average Parisian's attitude,

This afternoon I was sitting on a terrace in front of the Cafe Cardinal. It was quite warm and very pleasant Scores of men and women-mostly women, with a scattering of young boys and old men—sat nearby imbibing syrup and water. Enemy's Monoplane Sighted.

Everything was peaceful and se rene. Presently a passerby stopped and, shading his eyes, gazed into the "Another German aeroplane." he Says Argument Is Plain. Mr. Coovert neglects to point out the specific statements of the pro-moters of the measure in the voters' pamphlet that make the results enumer-ated by him so plain. In fact, the ar-gument in the pamphlet nowhere un-dertakes to say that the state will, dertakes to say that the state will, under the measure, undertake to assume title to all water front property up to full bank stage, either with or without compensation; nor do the promoters say that the measure is meant to be retroactive or apply to Portland water front owners or, at least, to that land between ordinary high and low water and unimproved; or that it is to be taken over by the state without compensation or that the improved water front may be taken by paying only the value of structures, or that the shore up to full bank stage will revert to the state and without compensation to the owners. What was said in the voters' pamphlet by the promoters of the measure was

Use of Water Commerce.

Use of Water Commerce.

Again, in the pamphlet, the promoters say in stating the purpose of the measure, "The proposed measure a six of prohibit the state from selling to prohibit the state from selling to disposing of the beds of its navigable waters and subject the same to use for the water commerce, navigation and improvements in aid thereof, and giving municipalities the right to construct public docks thereon." The opening statement in the pamphlet is to this effect, "The state of Oregon owns the beds of the navigable waters of the state up to low water mark." Nothing else than the above quotation can be found in the argument of the promoters in the voters' pamphlet that deals with the state's right under the proposed measures.

cuotations say that under the measure the state can not sell the beds of its navigable waters; it says that of the beds of the navigable waters the state owns only up to low water mark. Now, the state can only sell what it owns; therefore, if it undertakes to sell that portion of the beds of its navigable waters which it owns it would be the portion of the river bed, i. e., between low water mark and navigable water, or to harbor lines, if established, could cities build public docks, or could lands be leased if not needed for public docks.

The premoters say in their argument in the official pamphlet that if these measures pass adjoining upland The additional requirement that no county have less than 1200 population would, it is expected, apply to the creation of a new county from the area that might be left after consolidating Multnomah county and Portland. The amendment proposed is of general character, but would, of course, apply only to Multnomah county and Portland, as Portland is the only city in the state having over 100,000 population.

Special Committee Submits Argument.

The argument for the measure is submitted by a special committee of the legislature consisting of Senator Robert S. Farrell of Multnomah, Representative Jay H. Upton of Multnomah and C. J. Forsirom of Union county.

The committee suggests that the day will come when the growth of other cities in the state will make them desirous of the authority granted by

GERMANS ADVANTAGE

Both Forces in Past Week's Conflict Deadlocked; No Material Gain for Either,

By J. W. T. Mason. (Former London Correspondent for the United Press.)

New York, Sept. 19 .- Partial exhaustion on both sides was having its effect today on the fighting in France. The lull reported to have taken place in the fighting Friday ought, by right of logic, to have affected the Germans first because of their terrific efforts to reach Paris. War, however, is destructive of logic, and both sides seem to have given way to fatigue at once, deadlocking the contest along the Aisne, in places at least.

The advantage of this lull must have been with the Germans, who are on the defensive. The slackening in the energy of the allies' attack should have given them time to strengthen their field fortifications and overcome the advantage the French offensive possessed through being so much nearer to the Gallic base of supplies, Allies' Gain Blight.

The gain claimed for the allies' left wing probably was insignificant. General von Kluk, the German commander opposing this part of the Franco-Brisish line, still has the La Fere-Laon fortifications at his rear in this area of operations. His forces, would naturally give way somewhat before the temporary impetuosity of his enemies attack rather than risk holding too long and being locked up in these permanent fortifications.

Similarly, the slight advance said to have been made by the German center presumably was due solely to some unimportant tremor in the undulating At this point the French have been making desperate efforts to break the German front. For this reason it is of only to Ashland. Under the former fair to assume that most of the remethod, the mail would be delayed in nforcements the Germans have been bringing up were concentrated at the center. A new commander, General von Einem, had also just succeeded the aged General von Haussen, at the German erown prince's right. Offensive Not Resumed.

These things would account for a slight central Teutonic gain, which is not the same thing as a resumption of the offensive. With the memory still so recent of what happened to Van Kluk's lone offensive against Paris, it seems unlikely that any part of the German front will be permitted to move forward again in isolation and on its own initiative. Stories of developments in the southeast are conflicting.

As to them the measure does not seek to abrogate their title, but it does subject their title to public use for commerce and navigation and improvements in aid thereof. It leaves their title where it found it. It subjects their shore lands to the same servitudes as now exist in favor of commerce and navigation.

Foints Out Way.

It in no way enlarges as to shore

It in no way enlarges as to shore owners the burden under which their bare title is now held. It merely incorporates into the constitution what now is law by virtue of judicial decinow is law by virtue of judicial decision. The purpose of this is to prevent any court in the future from departing from the legal doctrine that now obtains by virtue of its judicial power to overrule former decisions. In conclusion upon this point, the measure means that, as to land always under water, the state can neither sell, i. a., give title to, or abrogate its trust for commerce and navigation and aids thereto, and as to land comprising the thereto, and as to land comprising the beds of navigable waters that have passed into private ownership, the state shall never by any process what-soever, lose its trust for commerce and navigation and aids thereto.
