Naco, Ariz., Sept. 28.—That a detachment of the rebels under General Maytorena have munitied and captured Zacatecas is reported here today by General Benjamin Hill, commander of the Mexican federalists, who were defeated by Maytorena at Santa Barbara last week.

According to information, Hill claims to have brought by his scouts, 500 Villistas under Colonel Jose Maria Acosta left the Maytorena command during the Santa Barbara fight and later were engaged by Urbelejo, commanding the rebels.

Hill, with 1500 men, is digging trenches about Naco, Sonora, opposite this village.

Several troops of American cavalry are quartered here to guard the border in the event of an engagement.

Their commander has ordered a string of box cars switched to a railroad track that parallels the international line.

Many Americans have arrived from interior points to witness the fighting.

Bristol Never Was Under-Secretary

Young Man Under Arrest Worked as Janitor for Y. M. C. A., But Held No Official Position.

The case of Roy Bristol, who was arrested Saturday afternoon when he arrived here from San Francisco, on a charge of non-support, was continued in municipal court this morning.

Bristol said he had been one of the under-secretaries at the Portland Y. M. C. A. in 1910, but that he never had any official connection with the association.

It is indignantly denied by General Secretary H. W. Stone, who states Bristol did janitor work and odd jobs around the building.

Bristol was arrested in Los Angeles during the past year promoting a hotel for girls. He admits marrying a woman in that city using the name H. E. Parsons.

She has as yet made no complaint against him, the charge of non-support having been preferred by Mrs. R. W. Parsons of 1415 1/2 Gilman street.

HALF MILLION LOST IN EUROPEAN WAR TO DATE, LONDON GUESS

Germany Puts Her Losses at 104,589; Allies Lose as Many, Others More Heavily

(United Press Leased Wire.) London, Sept. 28.—Some idea of what the war's losses have been thus far, military men pointed out here today, can be gathered from the German official admission that the fatherland has lost 104,589 men and missing up to Sunday totaled 104,589.

The allies, it was owned, had lost approximately as many more in the fighting in France; there were also to be taken into consideration Austria's enormous losses in Galicia and Russian Poland; Russia had suffered heavily in the same two fields, and in east Prussia and the Austrian and Serbian casualties, though small as compared with those to the north and eastward, were nevertheless sufficient to be considered severe for the smaller wars of former days.

Taking all figures together, it was said, an estimate of 500,000 killed, wounded and missing thus far would not be excessive.

Denmark Expects German Invasion

Victory by the Allies Would Prevent Inrush of the Kaiser's Forces and Loss of Country.

Copenhagen, Sept. 18.—(By Mail to New York.)—Denmark is not only praying for a victory for the allies in the present war, but they are exceedingly anxious to see a strong British fleet in the Baltic. This does not mean, however, that they do not look forward with trembling to the time when the British fleet enters the Baltic. It is when this attempt is made that they look to see the Germans invade their country in an effort to gain control of the straits and sounds connecting the Baltic and North seas, so as to keep their enemies out.

It is taken for granted that the Danes will resist such an invasion, but no one supposes they can do so effectively, as they look forward with anything but a relish to such an experience as Belgium has gone through, even though the Germans should be beaten in the end and expelled from the country.

If the British fleet could enter the Baltic on wings, however, its very presence there would remove an expedient from the Kaiser's hands which he would want to control of Danish territory, at least immediately.

Danes are thoroughly convinced, however, that a final German victory would mean their complete annihilation by the fatherland at no distant time. On the other hand, if the allies win, they look forward hopefully to the recovery of Schleswig-Holstein.

Tom Kay's Case Is Under Adversement

Circuit Judge Gatens Hears Evidence in Suit of Former Detective for $1000 Salary.

After hearing evidence in the suit of Tom Kay, a former detective sergeant of the Portland police department, against the city for $1000 salary, Circuit Judge Gatens this morning took the case under adversement.

Kay alleges that he was discharged without proper proceedings while the city alleges that Kay, at the time of his discharge, was under arrest on a charge of civil service regulations which provide for a six months probation period during which discharges can be made without special action.

Kay was a patrolman and sergeant of police for six years until 1909 when he resigned. He was reinstated in 1912, but later was discharged as reduced to patrolman and in October, 1912, was dismissed without proper proceedings, as he contends his former superior removed him from the probation provisions.

The city contends that Kay was appointed the second time under entirely new provisions, and that his reinstatement was subject to the probation regulation.

Some Changes in Round-Up Results

Fendleton Tired But Happy on Morning After—Round-Up Was Best in History of Undertaking.

Fendleton, Or., Sept. 28.—Not Fred Spain of Telocross, Or., but Sammy Garrett of Mulpton, Okla., won the world's champion bull rally race, world and national all round cowboy at the 1914 Round-Up which ended yesterday. By a delayed decision of the judges' board, the contest, in which it was ruled that Spain had disqualified himself in his bulldogging by a violation of the rules of the contest, instead of throwing his steer with his hands alone, he had bulldogged it as soon as he caught it, whereas the rules state specifically that the bulldogging shall be done after the throw.

The judges yesterday also ruled that Bertha Blancett won third instead of second in the cowgirl relay race, penalizing her five seconds because she did not run the full race Saturday, her horse bolting the track and cutting across the track.

The prize money was $1000. The champion of Montana thus won second honors in this event.

A checking up of the time in the cowgirl relay race showed that Allan Drumheller of Walla Walla, instead of winning second in the event, did not get in the money at all, both Braden Berking and Klapp Lynch, as well as E. A. Armstrong, beating him. Clarence Platts was awarded the championship in the stage coach race, his total time being best.

The expression between quotation marks in the letter sent to local business men by W. B. Shively, assistant secretary, at the instance of the Portland Retail Merchants' association executive board.

Plan Started in East. They are invited to join the "Peace and Plenty" movement and the letter explains:
