Aisne Battle Lasts 21 Days.

The battle of the Aisne, which began as a rear guard action 21 days ago, and became converted into general battle two days later, still rages with uninterrupted ferocity. The Germans have denuded their centre to send fresh forces into the fighting line on the west. The great "fish hook turning line," extending from Lassigny and bellying out to ward Douai and Bapaume now contains fully 75,000 men. Three troops of the active corps, the reserves, the landswehr and landsturm, are fighting shoulder to shouler, in a desperate attempt to break the allied line and isolate the forces of General D'Amaide from the German center which made and certain British supports, who now

To The Young Man----

The philosopher says that youth is never a matter of time, but of temperament, which accounts for the fact that there are as many old men of 16 as young men of 60.

So it is with clothes. There are those which, although worn to a thread, preserve to the last the freshness of youth, just as there are those which show the crow's feet of age before the first week of service is over.

Kuppenheimer Clothes possess in rare measure the golden quality of always staying young.

There is in their clean-cut style lines all the buoyancy of 21.

There is in the soft, durable fabric the youthful attribute of endurance under the grind of daily wear.

Belgium. All have been withdrawn to extricate the German right in France from an extremely dangerous position, and the fighting here is being waged by the German naval reserves and the German landwehr.

In connection with the defense plans under the direct orders from King Albert, all of the dykes and sluices have been opened and the lowlands, especially in the valley of the Scheldt, are covered with water, waist deep. The country generally in the valley of the Scheldt is low. It is all heavy ground and had not recovered at all from the initial opening of the dykes when the Germans, who tried to operate northward from Ghent, were caught and torced to retreat so fast that they left behind them many of their guns.

Most of these are still mired. The Digue de l'Escaut, which has been opened, will not flood the terri-tory adjacent to it as deep as some of the others. But it is swept by the fire of the forts. Chateaux of importance and huts of farmers who are very poor have alike been sacrificed to give a clean sweep to the Antwerp guns. All trees have been chopped down so that there is not a particle of cover for the foe. Because of all these precautions, the confidence of the Belgians that their new capital cannot be captured is supreme. Business is going on as usual. Even the presence of Zeppelins in the vicinity of the city caused no alarm. It is not believed that they will try to cross the forts, and di they do come they will be given a warm reception.
