MISS Anna Barron, the beautiful young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Barron, became the bride of Thomas Martin Fitzpatrick yesterday morning at 11 o'clock at St. Mary's Cathedral. A large and fashionable audience filled the church. The decorative scheme was beautiful throughout the altar. The wedding was a pink and white one and the delicate mauve shaded chrysantheums were used in great profusion with beautiful effect. The great high central altar was fringed with a background of delicate Pasadena ferns and palms. About the sacrality were groups of huge palms and high standard vases filled with clusters of the chrysantheums. In front of the communion rail were palms and chrysantheums.

Prior to the ceremony the choir rendered several English solos, including "Gloria" by John Baptist Monteverdi, "Perfect Love," Miss Nona Lawler, and several violin numbers were played by Miss Marie Chapman, Frederick W. Goodrich accompanist.

At 11 o'clock the bridal party took their places. The two bridesmaids leading, were Miss Margaret Mears and Miss Charlotte Laidlaw. They were prettily gowned in shell pink satin draped with pink tulle, which was caught in places on the skirt with pink roses. They wore shirred pink tulle picture hats and carried lovely arm bouquets of bridesmaid roses.

The bride was a picture of loveliness as she came down the aisle. Her wedding robe of soft white satin was simply designed with trimming with bodice and overdrape of the pink tulle and clusters of rose buds caught with drapes of the pink tulle. She also wore a dainty old fashioned nosegay of pink and white roses.

THEATRICAL NEWS

Playlet at Pantages Written by a Former Portland Resident. An act that claims especial attention at Pantages is "Smithy and the Eel" with Harry Cornell, Ethel Corley and their company. The piece is a crook playlet with a new slant by Howard Russell, formerly of Portland theatrical circles. It is a clever little playlet with a number of surprising turns that keep an audience guessing. It is very well played by all the company, especially Miss Corley and Mr. Cornell, who have the bulk of the work to do.

The headline feature is a re-arranged "Kingdom of Dreams," the classical dancing act with the Temple of Rama, for its setting. All of the dancing is graceful and effective, especially that of Ione Glennon. Mattie Townsend cares for the vocal solos. Another act that is back again is Early and Laight, who make as good as ever with their song and patter offering. The Acme Four, male singers, proved very popular in their repertoire of solos and ensemble numbers.

Bob Kelley and George Catlin appear in a black face and Chinese act that also proved popular. Whichever is the Chinaman deserves special mention. The opening number is a cycle act by Gray and Peters. It is good of its class and has one climax feat that won enthusiastic applause. The Mutual Weekly completes the bill.

Film Full of Trick Photography. In "The Patchwork Girl of Oz" the Peoples has a feature that will probably be very popular with the youngsters. It is from the book by Frank L. Baum and is a fantastic fairy tale with all sorts of queer animals and people. Fred Woodward is a capital animal actor and he has abundant opportunity to shine in this feature with his donkey and his woody, the latter of which is one of the funniest strings in the film. The featured part of Oz is played by attractive little Violet McMillan. The story is woven around a magician who makes a powder of life and brings the Patchwork Girl into existence with it. The film is full of trick photography that results in furniture walking about, people going through stone walls, walking up high fences and other astonishing feats.

Heir May Be on The Firing Line

Gus Binding is Only Legatee of Albany Man Whose Body Was Found in River Near Independence. Albany, Or., Oct. 6.—Gus Binding, who, it is understood, is on the firing line for Germans in the European conflict, has fallen heir to an estate valued at $40,000. He was left the only legatee of the estate of his brother, Fritz Binding, who was a resident of Linn county. Binding's body was found in the river near Independence several months ago. Whether he committed suicide by throwing himself in the river, or whether he met with foul play was not determined.
