By Hal Sheridan. Written for the United Press. Shibe Park, Philadelphia, Oct. 9.—George Stallings' hustling and aggressive Boston Braves, who turned their topsy-turvy in the National league by making a mad rush from last to first place at a time when they were considered hopeless fallanders, continued their surprise package tactics today by defeating the Athletics, 7 to 1, in the first game of the world's series.

The play of the codfish outfit was a revelation to American league fans, who had never seen them perform. They outplayed the Athletics at every look and turn. They outgassed them and outgassed them and tore to threads the Mackmen's attempts to play inside baseball.

Stallings on the Aggressive. Stallings' game plan fused Connie Mack and his great champions by using the Athletics' copyrighted tactics. Instead of trying to outguess the Mackers, they played aggressive baseball from the very start, and forced their foe to do the guessing. They humiliated Chief Bender by driving him from the world's series game for the first time in his career. Bender's control was being forced to pitch to the limit before the patient Braves.

When they got him in a hole in a pinch they waited away. A timely double and triple by Gowdy and a corking three bagger inserted by Whitte with two men on took all the starch out of Mack's brigade.

Gowdy a Batting Wonder. Hank Gowdy, the lanky lad who backstopped for the Braves, was the batting hero of the clash. He reached first every time he went to bat, picking Bender for a double and triple and drawing a pass and single off Wyckoff. Rudolph's pitching opened the eyes of the Athletics. He teased them with his slow ball, batted them with his splitter and caused them to come near breaking their backs when they swung at his curves. Only five of the Mackites managed to connect safely. The Macks drove only seven balls to the outfield, two fly balls and their five bibles making the Athletics' pitchers.

Former Mayor Fitzgerald and President James Gaffney of the Boston club placed themselves at the head of Boston's "Royal Rooters" and led the noisiest band that has been heard in Philadelphia in many a day around the playing field. Even Athletic fans stopped and cheered when they saw this wild and woolly collection of noise-makers give vent to their feelings. Wyckoff, who replaced Bender in the sixth inning, pitched cleverly and held the Braves to one run and three hits in the last two and one third innings. Three thousand fans were in line at daybreak today to purchase bleacher seats for the first world series game at Shibe park between the Braves and the Athletics. Most of them had the night there, many sleeping while leaning against the walls of the park. The gates were opened at 10 o'clock. At 8 o'clock street vendors appeared and sold breakfast to those in line. No women were in the all-night line, but several appeared at daybreak. The best places in the line could be bought for $1.50, some of the boys endeavoring to sell out.

At Somerset and Twentieth streets, carpenters were erecting bleachers on the roofs of apartment houses overlooking the field. Director of Public Safety Porter yesterday ordered the removal of such stands, holding they were unsafe. The building department, however, inspected them and pronounced them safe. Porter today threatened to post policemen at the apartment houses to prevent fans from entering.

Speculators Are Arrested. A dozen ticket speculators were arrested last night. Three were released and the others were held in bonds of $500 each. Other speculators were operating quietly.

In practice McInnes' hand seemed as good as usual. The Braves apparently were not at all nervous, and joked and laughed among themselves. Photographers swarmed about the Braves, snapping them.

Eddie Collins' automobile, given him for being the most valuable player in the American league, was wheeled on the field and presented to the second baseman.

The Athletics appeared on the field at 12:30 and the Braves appeared five minutes later. The National commission instructed the umpires to bench any pitchers using an enemy ball during the series and to bar him from the field for the rest of the games. It was decided to use the American league rules at the games played here and the National league rules in Boston.

First Inning. Boston—Moran strike one, called; strike two, foul ball; ball one; foul ball. Moran fouled to McInnes. It was an easy pop, which McInnes got without trouble. Evers up. Evers popped to Collins, who backed into right field for the ball. He hit the first ball pitched. Connolly strike one, called; strike two, foul; Connolly fanned, swinging hard at the third ball pitched. No runs; no hits, no errors. Umpire Dineen behind bat; Klein on

STATE-WIDE REPORTS SHOW CHAMBERLAIN'S RE-ELECTION IS SURE

Indorsement of Senator's Big Work and of President's Policies Purpose of Voters.

Certain reelection of Senator George E. Chamberlain by a big margin is predicted by Lester Humphreys, campaign manager for Chamberlain. He bases his opinion on reports from every part of the state. These show that with voters of all political parties Chamberlain is stronger than ever before. This popularity of the senator is due to his own efficiency and to the desire of the people generally to give an indorsement to President Wilson.

Now that the present session of congress is on the eve of adjournment, Mr. Humphreys reviews his work and declares the Senator Chamberlain is proud to have assisted in putting through such a remarkable legislative program.

The liberal allowance made by the army engineers for the improvements on the Columbia river is strong evidence of Senator Chamberlain's power and influence at Washington.

President's Policies Win Approval. "The Mexican policy of President Wilson has earned the approval of the nation.

"The federal reserve act is conceded (Concluded on Page Four, Column Three.)

WILLIAM J. BRYAN GIVES CHAMBERLAIN HIGH INDORSEMENT

Great Democratic Leader Declares in Positive Terms Oregon Senator Should Win

"I am especially interested in the reelection of Senator Chamberlain and the Democratic candidates for congress," writes Secretary of State William J. Bryan to the publisher of The Journal.

Secretary Bryan not only gives his indorsement to Senator Chamberlain, but points out that it would be most unfortunate if the work of the Wilson administration should be interrupted by a change in the complexion of either house of congress.

"I wish you would express to the Democrats the interest which we all feel here in his return to the senate.

"I need hardly add that Senator Chamberlain's personal popularity increases the interest which we all feel here in his return to the senate.

"WE'LL FIGHT TO THE LAST" IS WORD SENT BY BURNING ANTWERP

WAR SUMMARY BY J. W. T. MASON

Former London Correspondent for the United Press.

New York, Oct. 9.—A shift of the center of fighting in France from the region of the Aisne to districts farther north seemed likely today at any time. It is improbable that there will be any concerted abandonment by the Germans of their more southerly positions, but henceforward the increasing intensity of the conflict in the north of France and in Belgium ought gradually to relegate the field of the Aisne to a subordinate place.

Both sides undoubtedly are withdrawing heavily from their southern fronts to strengthen their forces in the north.

A British official report refers cautiously today to deserted German trenches along the Aisne battle line. While this report discounts the drawing of any sensational conclusions, it is legitimate to assume that military officialdom expects the gradual abandonment of that territory.

Two Struggles Improbable. Both sides, since the number of men on both sides is limited, it seems impossible that there can be an indefinite continuation of the titanic struggle on the Aisne for another six or seven days.

That the campaign's immediate strategy is shifting toward Belgium seems evident, while the southern front has been going on, the Germans unquestionably have won the initial successes, during the outpost fighting of the past few days.

In the engagement at Arras the allies plan to follow the railroad to the eastward, making a breach in the German front at the point where it protected the Kaiser's line of communications back to and across the Belgian frontier. The Germans, however, appeared in sudden force and drove the Franco-British troops to the westward—that is, farther away from the Teutonic communication line.

This forced the allies to seek a still more northerly route. They have, in fact, been run almost into the North sea and are directing their attempts as a forward movement against the extreme west and north of Belgium instead of establishing a front encroaching on the German positions along the west coast of the country.

Germany's Balance Wonderful. It now becomes necessary for the allies to reinforce their northern army very heavily.

The Germans appear to possess a marvelous ability for balancing their own strength so as to discount the allies' superior numbers. Somehow they have managed to show a greater force than the allies wherever the fighting raged hottest all along the Belgian frontier.

How to do this and at the same time to protect himself against an unexpected renewal of the allies' assaults on the central part of the front is a matter of paramount importance to the redoubtable Von Kluck.

Archduke Murder Trial Under Way. London, Oct. 9.—Except that the trial was in progress, no news was available here today of developments at the hearing of the persons accused of complicity in the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand, whose murder at Sarajevo a number of weeks ago was the spark which started the present war.

All that was known here of the case, in fact, was contained in Austrian newspapers reaching London by devious routes. These spoke of its principal trial in connection with the crime and said high treason was the accusation against them.

Though it was not officially so stated, it was presumed that Gavrio Priziz, the Serbian student who actually fired the fatal shot, was among them. Concerning his fate there had previously been much speculation.

German Shells Strike Antwerp Cathedral—Artillery Fire Is Deadly to Defenders of Inner Ring of Forts—Relief Column Believed Near.

(United Press Leased Wire.) Ghent, via Ostend, Oct. 9.—"We will fight to the last," was the message received by courier here today from the Burgomaster of Antwerp.

SHELL HITS ANTWERP CATHEDRAL

Ghent, via Ostend, Oct. 9.—The first German shell struck the Antwerp cathedral at 10 a. m. Thursday, according to a Belgian officer, who arrived here from the beleaguered city today. The Kaiser's howitzers, he added, were doing deadly work on the inner ring of the Antwerp forts.

On the forts, it was stated, the Germans were using their 42 centimeter guns, while training their smaller artillery against the city, which was said to be already scarred and blackened.

Thursday a Zeppelin dropped a bomb on the law courts. The Belgian artillery, in turn, fired on the Zeppelin and the officer believed, hit it.

GERMANS TRAPPED BY ALLIES' RELIEF FORCE

(United Press Leased Wire.) London, Oct. 9.—Attempting to smash a force of the allies south of Antwerp, a large body of German troops has fallen into a trap and been destroyed, it was stated by the war information bureau this afternoon.

How the allies happened to be operating south of Antwerp was not explained but the impression was that they constituted the force which, landing at or near Ostend, were reported marching Thursday to help the beleaguered Belgian garrison.

Experts here were beginning to think today that Antwerp would hold out until relieved. The forts' artillery, it was said, was superbly served and the ground about the city had been so accurately mapped in advance that every shot was made to tell.

The Germans, it was pointed out, were compelled to mass their troops, while the Belgians needed a force only strong enough to work their cannon.

BELGIANS WITHDRAWING, BUT LEAVE FORTS MANNED

Ghent, via Ostend, Oct. 9.—Antwerp still held out against the Germans today. The Kaiser's artillery hammered relentlessly throughout the night at the city's inner line of fortifications. Many shells fell in the city itself.

Overhead hovered scores of German aviators, signalling the range to the gunners outside the defenses. These aviators rained bombs, too, into Antwerp and in this way had started dozens of fires. The local fire department, helped by volunteers, had been working continuously for two days to keep the flames under control.

Refugees arriving here said the Belgian troops were being withdrawn from the beleaguered city, leaving only enough to man the forts. The censor would not permit it to be stated to what point the retiring forces were proceeding.

King Albert and his staff, also said to have quitted the city, were reported to have reached Zalsaele.

WHY NOT TRADE?

Here is a suggestion on how to obtain a few things you may want. Look through your storeroom and around the house and see if there is not some good article there which you have no further use for. For instance the design of even the best rug may grow tiresome; if it does trade the rug for something that is of some use to you.

You may be a carpenter, plumber, painter or skilled workman of some kind—if you are temporarily out of work why not fill in by finding some man who will trade clothes or something you need for your labor? Shrewd men are working trades of this kind every day in the year with the assistance of a Journal Want Ad. It only costs a few cents to insert a small Want Ad in the Swap Column and it may solve some hard problems for you. Think this over. To secure proper classification in The Sunday Journal have your Want Ad in early.
