

SHEPHERD STUMBLES ONTO BATTLEFRONT; HE MUST STAY THERE

French Hold Correspondent and Photographer Until the Fighting Moves Away.

EVEN CHILDREN PLAY WAR

They Fight About the Villages, Throwing Chestnuts and Stones, Forgetting Bruises and Out Scalps.

By William G. Shepherd.
On the battlefield near Soissons, Sept. 19.—(By Courier to Paris, and by Mail to New York.)—For five days we —Jimmy Hale, master photographer, and myself—have sat in this little town waiting.

We are at the battle front because we stumbled onto it. I did not know I was at the front until a French officer told me so.

"We'll go back," we explained. "We don't want to go to the front."
"But you're at the front now," said the officer. "So you can't go back.
You'll have to stay here until the tactical situation has changed."

And here we must stay, pledged not to reveal the town's name nor any details of the fighting.

Cannon's Roar Unceasing.

Hour after hour, day after day, antomobiles have been passing our little house on their way from one part of the battle field to another. They carry soldiers to the fighting lines, and bring back dead and wounded. They transport food and ammunition.

Above all other noise and distraction, the persistent, pitiless roar of the cannon continues without intermission.

"When the facts about this battle are known," said an officer to me, "it will go down in history as the most terrific and costly artillery duel that human beings have ever fought."

German Spy Arrested.

A huge German, a magnificent specimen of a man, who entered the French lines as a spy because his officers were desperately in need of information concerning the Gallic troops' position, has just been arrested. How he ever expected to get any information back to his chiefs, I can't imagine. As I looked at him, I realized how much more a spy must be than an ordinary soldier. I think he must have resigned himself to a spy's death before he left the German lines, for as he passed he looked over the heads of his captors as if he were only an onlooker.

"He'll cuddle up at the foot of a strong wall pretty soon," said a soldier.

I suppose he did.
The little boys of the town fight battles themselves, using chestnuts as ammunition. They throw the nuts with all their strength and I have seen them throw stones in their excitement. One little fellow fought with his scalp laid open. The war has hypnotized him.

Sengaleses Are Idolized.

Their idols are the black Sengalese troops. They know that the Sengalese would rather die in battle than in bed, because they believe that the best corner of heaven is saved for men killed in action.

The French officers agree with the small boys in this liking for the Sengalese.

"I wish I could believe about heaven as they do," said one officer to me.
Stumbling onto the front is no fun.
You see nothing and yet the officers tell you they are afraid you will run away and tell the Germans what you have seen. I have been assured a military movement was on. I see troops moving. But if I did get hold of a German who would listen to me, the only information I could give him would be that I had seen some soldiers, and I'm sure the Germans already know by this time that there are French and soldiers about.

Bill Posters Have Monopoly of Work

Charge Made in Evening Paper Is Disputed; Candidates Not Charged Exorbitant Rate for Service Rendered.

Although the bill posters of Portland are enjoying a streak of prosperity, due to pre-election activity, they do not exercise a monopoly of the business of putting up candidate's likenesses and announcements, as charged recently by an evening newspaper.

Volunteer bill posters, friends of candidates, are privileged to place them the best they know how, providing there is no objection from the party owning the space. Of course, the boards controlled by advertising companies are excepted.

The union bill posters charge from 3 to 6 cents a piece for placing sheets and carboards, and assert that this price is not excessive for the service rendered.

Because it is the day will be William T. Foster, president of Reed college and vice president of the Oregon Peace soci-

The Progressive Business Men's club divided attention yesterday between the subject of peace and the forestry service. William H. Galvani, secretary of the Oregon Peace society, declared that if the peace sentiment in this country should grow more powerful than the connivances of those who benefit most from war—the manufacturers of explosives, guns and armament—then war would be made impossible. Henry S. Graves, forester and chief of the United States forest service, outlined his plan for using the national forests as a credit in building highways in counties where forests are located. William D.

Wheelwright was chairman of the day.

BRITISH AIRMEN DO GOOD SERVICE WITH TROOPS IN THE FIELD

Bombs Dropped on German Positions Opposite French Left Center.

CRITICISM OF GERMANS

British Officer Says That When Deprived of Officers' Personal Leadership They Will Not Stand.

London, Oct. 9.—The official war news bureau issued a summary today of military operations on the continent in which British troops have been engaged, up to October 2. Referring to the British aviation record, this report said:

"It is conservatively estimated that since the beginning of the war our airmen have flown 87,000 miles, or an average of 2000 miles daily. They have spent 1400 hours in the air."

Mentioning one of their exploits specifically, the statement said:

"On September 24 one of our airmen dropped nine bombs on the German positions opposite the French left center. Some of them hit the enemy's rolling stock near Laon."

A British battalion commander was quoted as criticizing the German troops as follows:

"The German officers are skilled in leading their troops forward under cover and in closed bodies, but once the troops deploy in open order, depriving them of their officers' direct personal leadership, the men in the ranks will not face a heavy fire."

"Their supports either waver when their front line is checked, or else crowd forward, huddling together and losing the openness of their formation, thus making a magnificent target."

"At the start, lightning behind entrenchments, the Germans endeavored to gain ground by advancing at dusk and at dawn and digging themselves in, hoping eventually to get near enough to carry our trenches at one rush."

"They have never succeeded in doing this. In the whole, their night attacks have been half hearted."

Appeal Made for Mother Soon to Be

Young Wife, Half Blind, Husband Out of Work, Wants to Get Back to Home in Rhode Island.

Here is an appeal for work from a half blind girl who wants to get back to her mother in Rhode Island before her baby is born, and from her husband, who wants to help provide the passage money.

The Journal has investigated the request and believes that the woman should not attempt to work away from her home, but that something should be found for the man.

He holds an acceptable recommendation as an engineer and steam boiler, has been a stationary engineer, but is willing to do anything.
He has good recommendations.

They are Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Lang of 480 1/2 Belmont street. Mrs. Lang is 23 years old. At times they have had nothing to eat. Some help has been given them by the Salvation Army here. She wrote this letter to The Journal asking to be directed to some place where she could get work as a nurse or maid or at general housework, but she is unable to work. But if her husband could find work it is believed he could save enough to send his wife back to her home in Rhode Island. They do not ask for charity.

GRATITUDE IS EXPRESSED

A letter of thanks, unsigned, has been received by The Journal. Evidently the mother and three children who express their gratitude, told of their plight through the columns of The Journal and some generous soul responded. The mother writes: "To the one most kind and thoughtful of the less fortunate ones in need—the receiver wishes to thank you, for this assistance came when most needed, and though your name is not known, we trust you will be fully rewarded.
You helped to lighten the burdens of a worried mother and bring her heart of three little ones. Again we thank you."
