CORRESPONDENTS GO TO JAIL IN FRANCE, SO NEWS GROWS SCARCE

Richard Harding Davis, After Getting Out, Announces He Is Going Home, `

JOFFRE IS A SUPPRESSOR

He Provides a Prison for Those Who Violate Regulations, and It Isn't a Comfortable One, Either.

By Willfam Philip Sims.

Paris, Sept. 30,-(By Mail to New York)—Burglars in a miser's money box are welcome visitors to the miser compared with what correspondents on the firing line are to military commanders. War corresponding has become a prison offense in France, Gen eral Joffre simply won't have it. I have just passed two days under guard at the front, one day under guard in Paris, and eight days on parole, all because of this objection of General Joffre's to having newspaper men giving his war operations to once over a short range.

I was not the only member of this "seeing the war" party, either. There were seven of us-four of us Ameri-cans, including Richard Harding Davis, an old offender at corresponding. Having previously been pinched by nearly every other army in Europe, Davis remarked delefully following his French arrest:

"By gravy! This war is my Waterloo-I'm going home."

Davis to Quit Europe. I understand he is leaving tomorrow his "time" being up, his eight days' parole expired and his fines paid.

Three of our party and our chauffeur had just had the good luck to witness an action around the French left wing and were bound toward the center, at Rheims, when it happened. I was a merry captain who nabbed us. "Hey!" he called out gaily, in French of course, "where are you folks go-To Rheims," we chorused. 'How captain, grinning. Their Car Is Requisitioned. The joke was on us. Rheims, the

"Let's go ask the general," said the general said, was seven miles awayentirely too far to walk, "Oh, we have a car," we explained

"But I've requisitioned it:" answered the general. "Captain, will you escort the gentlemen out?"

The captain would, and did. He escorted us out and also in. Imagine a village without even a railroad station, a village consisting of a government tobacco shop, three farmhouses and several cowsheds, and you've got the scane of our arrest.
Imagine also one of the farmhouses built of stone in an "U" shape, with a stone fence across the top of the "U and you will have likewise an idea of the place of our imprisonment. Add to this, in the inside a tableland of hay and stable rakings, the whole thing very wet and smelly under the cold drizzle, and your sketch will be practically com-

Captives; Not Prisoners.

Through a gate in the stone wall our smiling captain conducted us. On the right was a door leading into the colonel's quarters. At the back, across the fertilizer plateau, were two more doors, through one of which I spie: two cows, one lying down and chew ing her cud and the other standing it that bent-double position assumed by kine when at their toilets.

The second door was also open It was labeled in chalk: "Prison." The captain ushered us in. Our quarters were identical with the cows bedchamber, German prisoners, French deserters, spies, suspects and pillagers stood or lay about on the hay which covered the floor.

They put us on our parole not to run away. They took our word for : that we would not run away, but they also stationed a sentry at the gate with orders to shout if we gave any indications of absent-mindedness concerning our promise.

Hay Loft to Sleep In. They were very, very polite and kind about it assuring us over and over that we were not prisoners-prisoners being entitled to rations which we were not. And a kick concerning our quarters finally did actually get us an empty hayloft, where the proper use of money also secured us a few bundles of hay to sleep on.

The morning of the second day our car was returned to us, an armed guard accompanying us back to Paris. Arriving late in the evening we direct in the corridor of the Cherche-Midi military prison. We narrowly missed sleeping there, too, but between mid-night and 1 a. m. some mysterious influence shifted us to the Invalides, where we had officers' beds, for the rest of the night.

Then we were released. Yes, the war correspondent's occupation is gone-that is, as it used to No more will correspondents tell generals how to fight their battles and also, perhaps, no more will the generals have fine battle cries put into their mouths and become famous for having uttered them. Prison doors yawn for correspond-ents. The lid is on.

Japanese Sailors Spoiled the Mines

Tale of Bravery Under Pire Is Told by Arrivals at Seattle on Liner Yokohama Maru; Men Paced Pire.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 16 .- A story of the daring of three Japanese sailors who braved death to blow up three German floating mines off Tsing Tau last month, reached Seattle with the arrival of the liner Yokohama Maru, of the Nippon Yushen Kaisha

The sailors were from the Japanese destroyer Kagero, which, arriving off Kiao Chau bay, found the water heavily mined. An attempt by the vessel's commander to blow up the mines was unsuccessful. The commander decided to launch a boat, a feat that would endanger his vessel, because of the heavy fire from the German forts.

The three sailors then stepped up and volunteered to destroy the mines Promptly they leaped overboard and swimming to the mines in the face of volleys of shots which fell around them, they sttached devices which made it possible to explode the mines at long range. They then returned to their vessel in
