In this connection a conservative estimate shows the displays themselves are worth $100,000.

People do not begin to understand all the things that are made in Oregon," said Colonel Dunne, president of the Manufacturers' association. "The show will show them. That's what it is for. Better still it will prove to people that Oregon made goods are article and costs no more to buy. One lesson I hope the exposition carries home to everybody and it is thispatronize home industry. Albert Is Found

Jury Returns Verdict After Deliberat-

After 28 hours of deliberation the jury in the Max Albert case returned a verdict of guilty at 8 o'clock last night. Albert was charged with setting fire to his house at 848 Sumner street on the night of November 18 1912, for the purpose of securing insurance on his furniture. The incendiarly origin of the fire was admitted. but Albert denied any connection with the setting of the blaze.

The jury recommend lenlency, but Its recommendation can have no effect unless Judge McGinn, before whom Albert was tried, should parole Albert The statutory punishment is from three to seven years. Sentence will be passed Wednesday morning.

Albert was acquitted when tried on a similar charge involving a fire, which damaged the store of L. Sax & Son, 207 First street. Sax and his son, Sam Sax, were also under indictment on that charge but the indictments were Judge McGinn directed a verdict in the A. Reading from the Congressional tecord of March 81, 1914, Mr. Reames uoted the speech that slurred the ad-ninistration. This was one of the its of literature with which Lafferty is now flooding the mails, sending it to the voters of this district. It deals with the "Democratic ship of state, with Mr. Bryan as aviator," which "has been up in the air for more than a year." It refers to Mr. Bryan's trip to California, saying "the premier of the Wilson administration took his place in the party biplane and aviated to California," where he "encountered dangerous cross currents of racial prejudice."
