

PROHIBITION AND THE SENATORIAL CONTEST SWAY WASHINGTON

Interest in Election in Sister State Occasion of New High Registration Mark.

JONES AND HANSON LEAD

Definite Spirit of Non-Partisanship Is Unavoided in Some Localities.

Seattle, Oct. 27.—As the election draws near, it becomes more and more apparent that the prohibition question is the most absorbing of all the political issues to be decided November 3 in this state.

A very spirited contest has been on, and with the arrival of the "Flying Squadron" from the east in the interests of prohibition initiative bill the fight is at a fever heat.

Fight for Senator.

Next in importance to the prohibition question in the senatorial contest. The fight is between Senator Jones, Republican, who seeks reelection, and Ole Hanson, Progressive, a Democrat, with W. W. Black as their candidate, figure in third place.

These two contests, prohibition and the senatorship, together with a determined fight for and against a universal eight hour law, which has been proposed under the initiative, have increased the registration in this state to a record breaking point.

Fusion in Places.

A spirit of non-partisanship reigns throughout Washington. In many counties Democrats and Progressives have united on a local ticket.

While W. M. Moore, Democrat, is still in the race, there is no decided effort being made in his behalf.

Cashier Beats Robbers.

San Francisco, Oct. 27.—Attacked by two highwaymen as he was crossing Market street with $1000 in his pocket, Cashier Jack Claxton of Pantages theatre knocked one down, put the other to flight and raised an outcry which led to the capture of one of the pair.

CALIFORNIA TO VOTE ON PROHIBITION; PLEA MADE FOR EXPOSITION

That It Would Make Fair Dry Is One of Wet Forces' Very Strongest Arguments.

ALL ELSE OVERSHADOWED

Three Cornered Senatorial Race and Gubernatorial Race Are Forced Into Second Place in Interest.

(United Press Leased Wire.) San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 27.—One week from today the voters of California will decide whether the saloons, breweries and wineries of the state must go or whether California will remain in the wet column.

The liquor interests are so confident that the prohibition amendment will be defeated that they are offering 5 to 1 that conditions will remain unchanged.

The prohibition amendment is overshadowing in interest all other propositions on the ballot, about 50 in number. The race between senatorial, gubernatorial and congressional candidates has been forced to take second place as a result of the fight between the wet and dry factions.

Many thousands of dollars are being spent by both sides in advertising and stumping campaigns. Congressman Richmond P. Hobson of Alabama, father of the national prohibition bill, which will be considered by congress at its next session, has just closed a tour of the state in the interest of prohibition.

Exposition Plea Made.

Anti-prohibitionists say that the amendment, if carried, would throw many thousands of men out of employment and would mean the loss of millions now invested in breweries, wineries and vineyards.

The force of the exposition argument probably is the most effective advanced by the wets, and the prohibitionists admit that if the amendment is defeated it will be due mainly to this one factor.

Another factor in the fight for prohibition will be the woman vote. The drys say this vote will put California in the dry column, but the anti-prohibitionists claim as absurd, asserting a majority of the women will vote against the amendment.

Three Run for Senator.

The universal eight hour amendment also is arousing much interest. The senatorial race is a three cornered one between James D. Phelan, Democrat; Francis J. Honey, Progressive, and J. R. Knowland, Republican.

The gubernatorial contest also is between three candidates—Hiram Johnson, Progressive, for reelection; J. B. Curtin, Democrat, and John D. Fredericks, Republican.

Button From Coat Of Andrew Jackson

One of the gold buttons that adorned the coat of Andrew Jackson when he was inaugurated president is now in the hands of a Portland man, T. Wanless, 751 East Main street.

Mr. Wanless received it from his uncle more than 60 years ago and has prized it among his choicest relics.

But Mr. Wanless finds he is getting old. He has no relatives and wants to dispose of the trinket because he thinks it would be more valuable to others than to him.

"I saved the button from my home when it was destroyed in Chicago two years ago," Mr. Wanless said. "Almost everything else in the house was destroyed and I came near being burned, too. I managed to save this and a few other relics, but I've been sick ever since."

Mr. Wanless is 75 years old. His uncle, Charles Gamble, was postmaster at Lexington, Ky., when Jackson was elected and was one of the leading Democrats of his home state who figured in the inauguration ceremony.

The button is perfectly plain, but the name of Andrew Jackson is engraved on the reverse side.

and other jewelry to the value of $800 late Saturday night by breaking the window of the Wilson Jewelry store on Granite street. Ryan, who was suspected, was taken in charge Sunday morning. That evening he disclosed where the loot had been hidden, and the missing articles were recovered.
