Psychology Club Reception.

The picturesque and hospitable home of Mrs. E. E. Covert, at 825 Johnson street was yesterday afternoon the scene of one of the largest and most handsomely appointed receptions of the season, the occasion being the opening social function of the Portland Psychology club.

Long stemmed chrysanthemums nodded their fluffly gold and white heads in welcome to the guests from their stations in tall vases and baskets used in the dining room. Potted plants, ferns, palms and growing flowers were combined with bowls of coconuts in gracing the reception room. Autumn foliage was used in other rooms.

The guests, who numbered about 400 were received by Mrs. Alice Webster, president of the club; Mrs. A. D. Charlton, Mrs. Charles A. Steele, Mrs. Lorne G. McAloney, Mrs. J. H. McKenzie, Mrs. G. K. Towers, Mrs. Millard Kyle, Mrs. Florence Crawford and Mrs. J. A. Jackson. At the door the guests were received by Mrs. Raymond E. Watkins, Mrs. Robert Berger and Mrs. W. T. Wade of the social committee. Mrs. J. Coulson, Haro and Mrs. Thomas Carrick Burke poured and those assisting were: Mrs. A. B. Davis, Mrs. Samuel Norton, Mrs. S. A. Herring and Mrs. F. W. Paris. Those assisting in a general way about the rooms were Mrs. E. E. Covert, Mrs. C. A. Johns, Mrs. E. D. Whitney, Mrs. Herbert Foster and Mrs. O. G. Hughson.

Words of greeting and the aims of the Psychology club were given in a delightful manner by Mrs. Helen Miller Senn, Mrs. C. J. Frankel spoke in a most interesting way of the proposed woman's building, telling of the great need for the building by next May when the city will have as its guests the members of the council of the general federation. "The Psychology of Character" was the subject of a delightful talk by Miss Anne Shannon Monroe.

The musical features of the afternoon were exceptionally fine. Miss Ruth Johns who possesses a dramatic voice of rare quality, was heard to excellent advantage in an aria from "Ernani." In response to an insistent encore she responded with a group of lighter numbers. Mrs. Julia Helene Swenson played violin numbers in her usually finished solos. Charles Swenson was heard in an arrangement of "Rigoletto" and Miss Carmel Sullivan played several charming harp numbers.

Seldom, if ever, has a club function brought out so many rarely beautiful gowns as did the Psychology club reception. Mrs. Webster wore a gown of white satin with a touch of green silk and touches of black lace. Mrs. Charlton was lovely in a gown of American Beauty taffeta with an over drape of net of the same color. Mrs. Steele was in cream faille with a bodice of cream lace. Alice blue crepe de chine with handsome embroidery was worn by Mrs. McAloney. Mrs. McKenzie wore cream lace over white taffeta. Mrs. Towers was in gray crepe de chine with a bodice of gray and pink. Mrs. Kyle was in terra cotta faille with gold lace and touches of oriental embroidery. Mrs. Florence Crawford wore a lovely gown of peach colored chamoise and cream lace. Mrs. Jackson was in a meshing with self colored embroidery. Mrs.

THEATRICAL NEWS

Piece Is Perfect Vehicle for Nat Goodwin, at the Heilig Theatre.

Repartee Delightful. It will probably be some time before the Heilig has such another delectable comedy offering as Nat C. Goodwin in "Never Say Die." The piece is so perfect a vehicle for Mr. Goodwin that he is able to bring himself and that means comedy of rare naturalness. After a few preliminaries at the beginning the comedian appears in the center from that moment on "Never Say Die" is a farce with a thread of a plot. Dionysius Woodbury, an American millionaire bachelor, is given a month more to live by eminent English doctors. To help an old friend, who is in distress about not being able to marry the girl of his choice because of lack of money, Woodbury marries the girl, who leaves at once for Russia with her mother.

Woodbury sends the old friend to Italy to study art for a year and tries his best to die by disobeying all the doctors' orders, but he steadily improves and at the end of the year, when the friend returns and the girl returns, Woodbury is not being his widow, as anticipated, he plans for her to get a divorce so he can give her the needed money. But she does not want a divorce any more than he does—and they do not get one.

The repartee is delightful and continuous and Mr. Goodwin surely proves anew that he is one of America's best comedians. His leading woman is Margaret Moreland (Mrs. Goodwin), who brings good looks, smart gowns and enough ability to make the part attractive. The splendid member of the cast is Dennis Cleugh, Woodbury's valet, and another member that more than pleased is Master Max Paley. Other members of the company are sufficient for the requirements placed upon them. The engagement includes a Saturday matinee.

Crowds at Opening.

When the doors of the National theatre were opened to the public last evening a greater crowd than that which assembled for the private opening the evening before was on hand. The house opened at 6:25 with 1200 people waiting for admittance. The house was taxed to its capacity for the performance which began at 7 o'clock. The second performance began at 8:30 and the third at 10 o'clock, with the same great attendance. The opening bill is "America," the New York Hippodrome spectacular "The Poetsmakers," Vitaphone comedy, music by the orchestra under the direction of Clifford Carney and the National Trio. The theatre will be open from 11:30 to 11:50 daily with changes of program on Sunday and Wednesday.

Orpheum Opening November 22.

Work on the new Orpheum theatre has progressed to such a stage that the opening of the theatre is definitely announced to take place the evening of November 22, when the theatre opens at 8:35 with every detail. Manager Frank Coffinberry does not yet know what will constitute the opening bill, but will probably receive information to that effect in a short time.

Old Man Coyote Tells Where He Came From.

There was one thing which had puzzled the little people of the Green Forest, the Green Meadows and the Smiling Pool for a long time. Where had Old Man Coyote come from? There was a time when they hadn't known that he existed. Then one day they discovered that he had come to the Green Meadows to make his home, and he had been there ever since. There had been a great deal of wondering about him, and where he had come from, but no one felt well enough acquainted with him to ask him so personal a question. The truth is, no one, unless it was Buster Bear, dared ask him, and Buster Bear wasn't interested. Sammy Jay had been one of those who had wondered a great deal about Old Man Coyote. Now, usually Sammy is not at all bashful or the least bit backward about prying into other people's affairs, but there was something about Old Man Coyote that always had discouraged him. Today, however, it was different. He had come over to tell Old Man Coyote that all the little people of Smiling Pool and the Green Meadows had given him a vote of thanks for leading Buster the Hound into one of the dreadful traps set by Farmer Brown's Boy, and so showing him how dreadful traps are.

When Old Man Coyote had found out what Sammy's errand was he was so surprised that he hardly knew what to say, and quite suddenly felt that they were going to be his friends. It was then that for the first time he dared to ask what he had wanted so long to know. "Mr. Coyote," said he, speaking in the politest manner, "you've been a neighbor for a long time, and yet some how I've never felt really acquainted with you. Why, do you know I don't even know where you came from?" Old Man Coyote's eyes twinkled. "You have plenty of company, I guess," said he. "Would you really like to know?"

"I certainly would," replied Sammy promptly. "I don't feel a whole lot more so as if we really were friends." Old Man Coyote stretched himself out comfortably, and a far away look came into his eyes. For a long time he thought of what he had said. He didn't say a word, but continued to look and look off into the distance. It was quite as if he saw something there. He wasn't thinking of anything unusual. He began to think that Old Man Coyote had forgotten that he was waiting, and had just started to clear his throat in order to remind Old Man Coyote, when the latter spoke: "I came," said he, "from the west—the great wide, wonderful west."

"Oh," said Sammy, because he didn't know what else to say. He scratched his head in an uncertain sort of way, and then he ventured another question. "Is—the west very far away?" Old Man Coyote didn't seem to hear. He was still gazing away, way off, and there was a soft, dreamy look in his eyes which made them almost gentle. All the fierceness and the sly look was gone, and an "omgnow" it was hard work for Sammy to believe that it was really Old Man Coyote he was looking at. At last Old Man Coyote sighed. It was a long, deep sigh. "Yes, I came from the west, the great wide, wonderful west," he repeated. "It must be a long way from here,"

S. F. Insurance Man Kills Self in Street

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 30.—G. A. Burling, of the Burling-Deane company, insurance brokers, committed suicide here at 2:30 a. m. today by shooting himself in the head.

The suicide occurred in the open street and seemed to have been due to a sudden impulse. Burling was carried into the central emergency hospital, but was dead when he arrived there. He was 46 years old, in good financial standing, and was not known to be suffering from ill health.

Correspondence Is Being Taught Pupils

Children in Outside Districts Are Invited to Send Letters to County Superintendent for Criticism.

In addition to regular school work pupils of the seventh and eighth grades of schools outside of the Portland school district are receiving some valuable training in correspondence work. Superintendent Armstrong is giving each pupil of the two grades opportunity to take up the work and to write letters to him, the first to be handed in to the teachers today.

Mr. Armstrong expects to receive from 300 to 400 letters each month. These will be grouped according to the size of the schools. Several letters will be taken from each school and sent to other schools of the same group for consideration. Telegrams, reports, inquiries and all manner of correspondence will be written by the pupils.

In connection with the work Mr. Armstrong has given the following instructions to the pupils: 1—Use small words; 2—Write short sentences; 3—Employ direct expressions. In addition: Don't use too many capital letters; don't use too many punctuation marks; don't begin too many new paragraphs.

JUDGE WM. GALLOWAY Candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court

Judge A. S. Bennett, the well-known lawyer of The Dalles, has recently written: "I have known Judge Galloway intimately for more than 40 years, and have never found a better man. In both private and public life he is above suspicion or reproach. In his home, as a husband and father, he is ideal. Truthfully has it been said of Judge Galloway, 'He has in more than one instance in the past shown that he has the courage of his convictions in difficult positions, and that he has made a record for honesty and courage.' He always does his duty as he sees it, regardless of consequences, and is absolutely invulnerable to 'pressure' or 'influence.' He has a fine legal education and is very familiar with legal principles and the administration of justice generally. His courtesy and kindly disposition are well known. He would make an ideal Supreme Judge."

The Daily Capital Journal, of Salem, speaking editorially in a recent issue, says: "Judge William Galloway will be in the race for justice of the Supreme Court when the votes are counted on November 3. A pioneer of the state, he has a host of friends all over Oregon who have faith in his personal integrity, as well as his ability as a jurist, and they are doing his campaigning for him, and if reports may be credited, effectively, too. A strong point in his favor is that a majority of the voters of the party honestly believe that the supreme bench should be non-partisan, and his candidacy will give them an opportunity to express this opinion at the polls. Viewing the situation from an unbiased standpoint, it would look as if Judge Galloway might be promoted from the district court, where he has served long and faithfully, to the higher position to which he aspires, and in doing so the people of Oregon will make no error of judgment."

Judge Henry E. McGinn, of Portland, one of the ablest Circuit Judges of Oregon, in a letter of September 21, 1914, writes: "I have known Hon. William Galloway for a great many years. In fact, I cannot say when I did not know him. He has always been a man of the highest integrity and courtesy. He is a candidate for the high office of Supreme Judge of the State of Oregon. If elected to this office, the state will be served in the best possible way. Judge Galloway has all the qualifications for a good judge. Anyone who may take him for what I have here said will never regret it."

A Message For All Women

MME. ISE'BELL, whose fame is largely due famous women who use her formulas, follow her teachings and advise others to do likewise, says "Youth and beauty are woman's cherished possessions. Do not imperil them by using inferior toilet preparations, put up in large quantities at low prices. The ravages of disease and time are no more fatal to beauty than the use of improper powders and creams, especially compounded for the bargain counter."

Below we name the products of a lifetime of study, honest intent and intelligent brain. They are regularly purchased and used by such well known women as Maxine Elliott, Gertrude Elliott (now Lady Forbes-Robertson), Blanche Bates, Claire Loftis, Maude Lillian Berr, Louise Paulin, Isabel Rush, Zelle de Lussan, Mabelle Sambrich, Thelma Frigenza, Lucy Weston, Ruth Peebles, Vesta Tilley, Effie Shannon and hundreds of others. These famous women have made a study of beauty and health. None knows better how to preserve and maintain the advantages of a clear skin and good complexion.
