Big Business Bluff Called During the course of his description of the new currency law and the establishment of a federal reserve system, which becomes operative November 16. he had occasion to refer to the attempts of Wall street and big business to defeat the measure when it was under discussion in congress and to their bullying threats to create panic in order to discredit the adinistration with the people.

"But the administration was equal to the emergency," said the senator, "and our great and fearless secretary of the treasury, Mr. McAdoo, called in the newspaper reporters at Washington and served notice on the money trust through them that if it attempted anything of the sort he would throw open the vaults of the treasury to re-lieve the situation and financial barons would have to compete with the gov-ernment of the United States."

The applause that greeted this statement was uproarious.

It indicated clearly the temper of the people and the popularity of the present administration. Money, say economists, is only a symbol--sought by men not because of itself, but because of what it has come to mean. In the frosty realm of the Eskimo, for instance, the dollar would be nothing more than a metal disc, meaningless and valueless. In Nome, Alaska, it means a little more-possibly as much as does a quarter in this more favored clime.

Half Minute Store Talk-Last Wednesday a lady came in to use our free phone. After we had assisted her to get the de-sired number she remarked that being a stranger in the city she had at first been puzzled as to where to go, but that she re-membered reading about "the store of 100 per cent service" and knew that we would be glad to assist her. A little thing, you say; yet we're trying to do even the little things with that courtesy, cheerfulness and attention that go to make this store of real service to the community.
