DECLINE IN COTTON
INDIRECT CAUSE OF DECLINE IN CHEESE

South Is Large Buyer of Wisconsin Output When Conditions Are Good.

TARIFF NOT RESPONSIBLE

Tillamook Prices Determined by Those in Middle West; Also, Canadian Cheese Higher Than Here.

That the decline in the cotton market and not the Democratic tariff is responsible for the present low prices of dairy products is the refutation recently made by E. H. Farrington, dairy expert of the University of Wisconsin, in response to the prelection claims of the Republican press.

Mr. Farrington speaks with particular reference to cheese and his statements are admirably suited to answer an editorial utterance of the Tillamook Herald, reprinted in the Oregonian last month, to this effect:

"Cheese took another drop on Tuesday as the result of Democratic free trade, with little or no demand for Tillamook cheese. The price of cheese in Wisconsin is the lowest in many years, a large quantity having been sold last week for 12½ cents. Are you going to vote for more Democratic free trade next year?"

Quoted in Sheboygan County (Wis.) News and Dairy Reporter, Mr. Farrington says:

Cotton Cause of Drop.

"The decline in the cotton market has indirectly caused a drop in market prices for Wisconsin cheese. The south is the largest buyer of Wisconsin cheese and hence, when the cotton situation became acute the leading buyers for the southern markets stopped stocking up on flats, longhorns and dairies, which was reflected in decidedly lower quotations in the greatest cheese producing state of the Union.

"During the past few weeks there has been a distinct difference noticeable between the average figures quoted for eastern cheese and the prices current on Badger cheese.

"It happens, however, that the home consumption of cheese in the eastern market is so large that the price is kept nearer a level the year around, while with western cheese different conditions arise that may affect the price considerably.

Wisconsin Barometer for Tillamook.

Mr. Farrington is speaking of Wisconsin cheese in particular, but it happens that Wisconsin cheese is the barometer which regulates the price of Tillamook cheese. The market price for this part of the country is determined by the market price in the middle west, and so when prices are low in Wisconsin they must of necessity be low in Oregon. And the decline in the cotton market is responsible for the low price of cheese in Wisconsin, as Mr. Farrington points out.

The bulk of Tillamook cheese is sold in California and the moment the Oregon cheese manufacturers fail to meet the Wisconsin price the Wisconsin manufacturer will jump in and grab the market.

"Another proof that the tariff is not responsible for present prices in cheese is pointed out by local cheese men in the fact that Canadian cheeses were a cent or two higher than American last month.

Hawthorne School Issue Sidetracked

Time Otherwise Taken at Yesterday's Meeting—Special Session to Be Held Saturday Evening.

Although the assembly room of the Hawthorne school, East Fourteenth and Alder streets, was packed with mothers who came to the meeting yesterday afternoon with the expressed purpose of listening to arguments on the question of whether the school board is to give them a new school or allow them the complete use of the old building, the discussion was sidetracked by the discussion of social affairs and a lengthy program. A protest meeting will be held at the east side library Saturday night, when the postponed matter will be earnestly taken up.

A part of the Hawthorne school is being used for high school purposes, making some of the overflow from the adjacent Washington High school.

The school board, it is understood, purposes to take four more rooms of the school for high school use when the new term starts in February. Petitions have been circulated, asking the board either to take high school students from the grammar school building or give the grammar pupils a new building.

Mrs. G. L. Euland, president of the Parent-Teacher circle, was in charge of yesterday's meeting. Although it had been announced that the matter would be taken up at that time, she opposed the action, on the ground that important routine business must be transacted. Yesterday at noon she notified the speakers scheduled of the change in the program.

Saturday night's meeting will be devoted strictly to a discussion of the issue. Dr. Alan Welch Smith of the school board, it is expected, will be present, with City Commissioner Bigelow, O. M. Plummer, also of the board; Dr. Henry Russell Talbot of the Episcopal church; Dr. S. E. Joseph, M. R. McFaul, L. M. Lepper and Whitney L. Boise, Frank S. Grant and Oglesby Young.

The East Side Business Men's club and the Ladd Addition Improvement club are cooperating with the women of the Hawthorne district in supporting the protest. Speakers from the East Side Business Men's club were scheduled to take part in the discussion yesterday.
