

MRS. FRENCH SEES BATTLE IN FRANCE; SHELLS BURST NEAR

New York Society Leader Inspects Field Hospitals for American Workers.

SEES AIR CRAFT BATTLE

Had No Feeling of Personal Fear, So Enthralled Was She With the Horror of the Scenes About Her.

London, Nov. 5.—(By mail to New York)—How Mrs. French, the New York and Newport society leader, who since war started has been in charge of one of the American hospitals in France, stood all alone on the banks of the Aisne and, with shells bursting all about her, watched the artillery duel between the British and Germans, was told by herself for the first time today.

Mrs. French, who is a sister-in-law of Elsie French Vanderbilt, has just arrived in London to arrange for sending a hospital unit to the new British base in northern France, and is stopping at the Ritz. Mrs. French also criticized the administration for not protesting against the activities of Count von Bernstorff.

"I received a letter from a friend today," she said, "who wrote that he had invited 24 persons to meet Ambassador Bernstorff at dinner in Newport and had received 24 declinations. All the news I get from America on the subject is to the effect that all the best people in New York simply refuse to have anything to do with Ambassador Bernstorff, as anybody who knows the rudiments of diplomacy knows he has committed blunders, to use the kindest expression, which should cost him his job instantly. His utterances on the subject of the Germans invading Canada is only one of his offences against diplomatic decency."

Reported on Field Hospitals. Mrs. French went to the front on behalf of the American Ambulance associations of Paris to make a report on the field and base hospitals.

"It was my good fortune to drive several staff officers to the lines in my car, and as a result I happened to see a small slice of the battle of the Aisne," she said. "The officers were anxious to watch the artillery operations, so I took them to a point, which I am not at liberty to mention, on the heights overlooking the Aisne, where a battery was engaged with the Germans across the river. The officers apologetically informed me they would have to leave me, as they were going forward under fire, so I remained behind with the chauffeur. I could hear heavy guns booming near my hand and finally curiosity overcame my distraction; so, leaving the car hidden in the woods, I started across the fields in the direction of the firing. Soon I could see shells bursting in the air and all of a sudden the whole scene of the artillery duel spread before me from the high plateau on which I was standing.

Shells burst near her. "Guns were below me and to my left, and the Germans were hidden on the opposite bank, but tiny puffs now and then rising above the trees showed me about where they were. It was so exciting the thought never occurred to me that I was in danger, and even when shrapnel burst a few hundred feet away I was so engrossed in the spectacle of my own peril that I felt unimportant. Afterward I learned that the Germans could easily have hit me if they had wanted to. They never tried, however, whether from an un-Teutonic sense of chivalry or because it wasn't worth wasting shells on one person I cannot say. Shells which exploded in my neighborhood were simply those badly aimed at the battery. "After I had better understood for what seemed a long time my chauffeur came up and begged me to retire to a safer spot. I had started back, when we suddenly saw a Taube above the German lines, and instantly afterward heard the firing of anti-aircraft guns from our side of the battle line. We stood there, the chauffeur and I, gazing breathlessly upward, and beheld a monoplane set out for a short flight. Then we witnessed that most thrilling of all conflicts, a duel in the air. As I stood looking up at the two machines circling above each other I realized for the first time, I think, what a terrible business war was. There was something indescribably sinister and vicious about the movements of those two graceful craft, each seeking to destroy the other. I shuddered with the horror of it, yet even then no feeling of personal fear came to me. I can't explain why, except that one is so enthralled by these things one seems to forget one's self. After that I had enough."

Tillamook Notified To Raise Money

Writ From Supreme Court Directs That Tax Be Levied to Get Money for Construction Company.

Tillamook, Or., Nov. 17.—A writ of mandamus issued by the supreme court has been served on the mayor and councilmen of this city. The writ requires that a tax be levied within 10 days to pay a warrant of over $16,000 given to the Warren Construction company two years ago for building a sewer in the city. If this is not done, the city must show cause for disobeying. The writ is one of the outcomes of litigation now in the supreme court involving street paving done here by the construction company two years ago. Citizens who thought the pavement not up to specifications took the matter into court. The circuit court ruled against the construction company and it appealed. No issue as to the sewer had been raised heretofore.

BRITISH SOLDIER FROM INDIA COOKING DINNER

The Indian troops Great Britain has sent to France to fight with her troops will have none of the regular mess of Tommy Atkins from England. They cook their own food to suit themselves. Thousands of them squat over the fires and cook their simple dinners every night.

Fisherman Is Drowned.

Marshfield, Or., Nov. 17.—Eric Aho, a fisherman, 40 years old, who came here from Astoria this summer, was accidentally drowned at the stove mill Monday near his house float. Aho went outside to fix a net and when found was between two logs of the float. He probably fell into the water after some sort of an attack of illness.

Coulson Has Prosecuted a Vigorous anti-tramp campaign in his village.

London, Nov. 5.—(By mail to New York)—How Mrs. French, the New York and Newport society leader, who since war started has been in charge of one of the American hospitals in France, stood all alone on the banks of the Aisne and, with shells bursting all about her, watched the artillery duel between the British and Germans, was told by herself for the first time today.

CHINESE BRAVELY SIT ON ROAD THEY LEARN JAPANESE WON'T USE

After Telling Invaders They Mustn't Cross Certain Line They Guard Wrong Road.

JAPAN COLONIZING ISLES

Philippines, Christian and Moslem, Obey President Wilson's Request for Day of Prayers for Peace.

(United Press Leased Wire.) Tokyo, Oct. 24.—(By Mail to San Francisco)—Some time in the far distant future, when the official Chinese version of the Japanese troops' operations against the Germans at Kiao Chau is published, doubtless it will be found that General Chang Hsun's forces bravely prevented the Japanese from venturing outside the zone marked out for them by the Peking government.

Inasmuch as the Japanese are now at Tsinanfu, more than 100 miles west of the line they were told they must not cross, this statement may seem like an exaggeration, but it is not. There are two roads from the coast of the Shantung peninsula to Tsinanfu. One is the old postroad which Confucius traveled several thousand years ago; the other is the Shantung railroad, only ten years old. From the minute that the Chinese discovered the Japanese would advance by the railroad, the former have guarded the postroad unceasingly. Hence not a Japanese has passed there, and General Chang Hsun has "saved his face."

The Japanese foreign office's announcement that the German island in the Pacific which the milko's naval forces have seized would be occupied only temporarily has evidently been accepted in much better faith in the United States than in Japan. The Japanese press has hailed these islands' occupation as a step in the direction of expansion and there is little discussion of a future evacuation. Incidentally several Japanese officials has already left here to visit the islands in question and report concerning their possibilities of trade and development.

Announcement has also been made of the establishment of a line of Japanese steamships to visit them regularly, and the first boat, leaving today, will take 25 Japanese pioneers to Jaluit to begin business.

Anyone who wants to buy Japanese antiques and curios should visit Japan now, because the greatest bargains of a generation are being offered. In recent years more than 5000 Americans and a good many other foreigners have toured the country annually, and it is estimated that they spent in it about $500 each on an average, for curios, or a total of some $5,000,000 a year.

Owing to the war, however, there have been practically no visitors at all from abroad, with the result that the curio dealers are offering their wares for a fraction of the usual prices.

News has reached here that the Moros of the Philippines scrupulously observed President Wilson's day of prayer for peace, with the exception of a contingent who had retired some time previously to the top of a hill where they declared war on the United States.

Those who remain at peace made considerable of an occasion of the day, however. Those who have become Christianized met at the Mission chapel, and the Mohammedans, not to be outdone by the converts, assembled in the mosques, where the prayers were intoned in Arabic.

Some of the people declare there is no peace prayer in the Mohammedan prayer book, but the Moros hotly deny this. Henry fails to get place. Oakland, Cal., Nov. 17.—The petition of the citizens' committee that Francis J. Henry be appointed a special deputy district attorney, with full charge of the grand jury, to investigate alleged graft conditions here, was turned down by the board of supervisors, 8 to 2. It is believed this action ends the agitation to bring Henry here to start a graft inquiry.
