Yo-Ho, Commander McNulty Discovers a New Cousin, Oh, Ho. She Likes Crawford.

John McNulty, famous amateur chef, with Crawford a specialty, otherwise recognized as nautical expert of the United States hydrographic office, is a busy man this week preparing the vanda for three crawfish parties that are planned for his visiting cousin, Miss Eva Page, who is playing at Loew's Empress.

The first Mr. McNulty knew he had a cousin on the stage was when he received word from another cousin in San Francisco that "Eva" would be here. Mr. McNulty admits that he did not even know her last name until he rushed word to the south asking for it so that he might pay his respects. Mr. McNulty also admits that it is pretty serious business having a stage cousin and all his friends are casting doubt and suspicion upon him. Even his family thinks it a good joke on him but he declares the family album holds pictures of Miss Page when she was a baby. The whole difficulty is that Mr. McNulty was born in the east, while Miss Page is a San Francisco girl, and their paths have never before crossed.

John McNulty, famous amateur chef, with Crawford a specialty, otherwise recognized as nautical expert of the United States hydrographic office, is a busy man this week preparing the vanda for three crawfish parties that are planned for his visiting cousin, Miss Eva Page, who is playing at Loew's Empress.

The first Mr. McNulty knew he had a cousin on the stage was when he received word from another cousin in San Francisco that "Eva" would be here. Mr. McNulty admits that he did not even know her last name until he rushed word to the south asking for it so that he might pay his respects. Mr. McNulty also admits that it is pretty serious business having a stage cousin and all his friends are casting doubt and suspicion upon him. Even his family thinks it a good joke on him but he declares the family album holds pictures of Miss Page when she was a baby. The whole difficulty is that Mr. McNulty was born in the east, while Miss Page is a San Francisco girl, and their paths have never before crossed.

WANT BOARD ENJOINED
M. J. Walsh and eight other electrical contractors filed suit yesterday to enjoin the Portland school district from proceeding with installation of electrical work in the Couch and Shattuck school buildings, for which the contracts were recently let, without advertising for bids and contracting for the work. They allege that the school board is attempting to evade the law.
