

CLATSOP DELEGATION WILL ACT TOGETHER ON EVERY MEASURE

Port, Sport and Return to Old System of Auditing of Books Are Discussed.

Astoria, Or., Jan. 6.—Senator C. A. Linsenweber and Representative Jefferson and Anderson, comprising Clatsop county's delegation to the state legislature, which convenes in Salem next Monday, held an open session here last evening, which was attended by representatives of the county and city governments and the port commission, and by individuals interested in legislation proposed for this session of the legislature. The delegation acquainted itself with the legislation wanted by Clatsop county, and will go to Salem with well defined plans to work for its constituents' interests.

Engineer Walsh, representing the Port of Astoria commission, presented a bill amending the act under which the port exists, so as to give the commission power to operate a boat and barge line on the Columbia and to sell oil and coal to vessels at the municipal docks. The bill received the approval of the commission.

The Clatsop delegation will support the bill to be introduced abolishing the present alleged inefficient and expensive system of auditing county books, permitting the counties to return to the old style, by employing accredited auditors locally. Taxation, county roads, state aid and new school regulations, were among the matters discussed and taken up for consideration by the delegation.

Clark Loughery, representing sportsmen of this county, offered a bill proposing certain changes in the game laws, agreed to by all clubs in the state, for consideration.

Senator Linsenweber and Representative Jeffries and Anderson have organized, and agreed to introduce no bill, and to act as a bloc, that does not have the sanction of the entire Clatsop county delegation.

IRRIGATION MEN ARRIVING FOR A 3 DAY SESSION

strenuous fight to obtain the support of the congress for southeastern Oregon county.

Delegates from the newly organized county of Jefferson will sit behind Crook county in everything advanced by the latter county on the floor of the convention, realizing, it is said, that there is no possible chance of receiving any aid for irrigation projects in that section in the immediate future inasmuch as the Crook county projects have the right of priority.

Split Is Imminent.

Despite the anxiety of central Oregon people to procure the indorsement of the congress for projects in which it is vitally interested, there have been many rumors of a split in the Crook county delegation, with the Bend people on one side and Redmond people on the other.

Any lack of harmony comes from desire of each city to have the congress recommend favorably on projects in the vicinity of each.

To be explicit one wants the immediate completion of what is known as the north unit or north canal on the west side of the Deschutes and the other wants the completion of west side unit.

Many of the Crook county delegates who arrived at the convention, inclined to scoff at the reported lack of harmony and state that most of it is imaginary. It is realized by all that the central Oregon delegation must be in complete accord on the floor of the convention if it is to receive the support of the congress.

A meeting was to be held this afternoon of members of the delegation to go over the central Oregon situation and adjust whatever differences may exist. It is expected that the close of this caucus will find the whole delegation on terms of perfect understanding and with a definite campaign of action.

The question of indorsement by the congress of state aid for projects now contemplated or partially completed will also undoubtedly make for some of the big issues of the meeting.

Congressional Aid Sought.

Each section will vie with the other to procure the support of the congress, as it is recognized that the indorsement of the congress has a certain amount of weight with the legislature. Similar recommendations are also made to the reclamation service as affecting governmental aid.

The policy of the congress will be shaped by the resolutions committee. It is expected that the committee will recommend either that future irrigation work be done by the state alone, the state or national government jointly, or by the state through irrigation bodies, or through private organizations. Whatever the recommendation it is certain to meet opposition on the floor from opponents of other policies in the congress.

The congress will be in session three days, tomorrow, Friday and Saturday, and it is planned to cram each day with routine work, set speeches and discussions, as well as everything else that goes to make up a great convention.

Alberta Minister Speaks.

The outstanding figure at the congress will be the Hon. Duncan Marshall, minister of agriculture for Alberta. Mr. Marshall will speak both on the floor of the convention and at the big banquet planned for tomorrow night at the Commercial club. Members of the Oregon legislature as well as delegates to the convention will be guests. Mr. Marshall is said to be one of the most eloquent speakers on the American continent and will tell tomorrow evening of methods used in the dominion to assist new settlers to become established and prosperous.

Estimates by officers of the congress place the minimum attendance at the meeting at 300. President A. B. Thomson of Echo reached Portland this morning and Secretary Fred W. Wallace of Tumalo has already set up a desk in the lobby of the Imperial hotel to register delegates as rapidly as they arrive.

Scores of men prominent in development and irrigation work in the state are expected to be in attendance at the congress. Editors, legislators, farmers and all others having the development of Oregon at heart will be present, too.

The central Oregon contingent includes delegates from every town from Bend to Gateway and Grand View to Prineville.

Everyone predicts a busy three days and all in all the congress which opens tomorrow will undoubtedly be the most important of its kind ever held in Oregon.

IN N. Y. SUBWAY; OVERCOME BY HEAT

than 150 of them were brought to the surface and carried into the Circle theatre, in Columbus Circle, where they were stretched on the stage. Later they were taken to a hospital.

Firemen at this point were able to work only in five minute relays. Many of them were overcome, and had to be revived, as were the passengers, with pulmonary.

It was between Fifty-third and Fifty-ninth streets that conditions were worst. Special calls were sent for fire sappers to render aid in this section of the subway.

Firefighters Restore Victims.

A large number of the victims were taken out at Fifty-third street, where a grating was cut and ladders were lowered. The unconscious forms were laid first on the sidewalk, where first aid with the pulmonary forms administered. Later they were taken into neighboring houses and stores and ultimately all who failed to recover fully were removed to hospitals.

Of those who escaped from the cars many were rescued with bruises and contusions on their bodies from the grating in the subway. That there were no deaths among them from contact with the third rail was remarkable, but so far as the first search revealed, it was touched by nobody.

The guards locked the doors, in accordance with standing instructions, as soon as the trains stopped, to prevent a panic, but in a number of instances they were battered down and the rush toward the exits began.

The first firemen to reach the line of the subway ripped off the manholes and lowered ladders to guide the escaping passengers. Three fire alarms were sent out following the blowout and the men from all the fire houses responded. All available ambulances were also in use.

It was admitted that there might be deaths among those sent to hospitals.

The blowout was attributed to a short circuit.

District Attorney Perkins predicted an investigation into subway methods, as a sequel to the accident. He and Assistant District Attorney Breckenridge paid a visit to the subway while the rescues were being made. It was expected that responsibility would be placed soon.

The subway tieup caused frightful congestion on the surface and elevated lines. The platforms of the "L" were dangerously packed in consequence and there were numerous minor mishaps.

Get Deserved Pay

Expert Statistician Says Engineers and Firemen Do Not Receive Their Share of Increased Revenues.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—W. F. Lauck, an expert statistician, testified today at the railroad wage arbitration hearing here. He asserted that the engineers and firemen of the railroads did not receive their share of increased revenues in the form of increased pay. He maintained that while the productive efficiency of the employees had increased their pay remained the same.

"The earning power of the engineers and firemen declined, despite increased productivity of their labor," said Lauck. "The increase in their mileage has not kept pace with the increase in traffic mileage. Although the rate paid per locomotive per mile increased, the earnings of the employees are comparatively smaller, because it is impossible for them to make more mileage."

Glynn Will Be Candidate.

Roseburg, Or., Jan. 6.—George Glynn, who is associated with the Luse Land company at Sutherlin, has announced that he will be a candidate for state senator from Douglas county if the governor issues a call for a special election to elect a senator. The citizens of Sutherlin recently held a mass meeting, at which they endorsed Glynn for senator. He is a Republican.

MISS HOBBS IN NEW JOB

The Oregon state industrial commission met last Monday, Miss Fern Hobbs being seated as the new member. William A. Marshall was chosen as chairman of the board. No other important business was transacted, but at the regular meeting next Friday, in Salem, there will be consideration made of future policy.

HUSBAND PLEADS FOR POST MORTEM UPON
BODY OF HIS WIFE

Gottfried Eschmann, Walla Walla, Alleges Mrs. Eschmann Was Poisoned.

(Special to The Journal.)

Walla Walla, Wash., Jan. 6.—Alleging that his wife came to her death through medicine given by mistake, Gottfried Eschmann, 315 Howard street, yesterday afternoon directed that a post-mortem examination be made, and the autopsy will be conducted by local physicians this afternoon.

Mr. Eschmann and his daughter, Mrs. J. S. Bell, of Spokane, yesterday said Mrs. Eschmann was taken to the hospital a week ago to receive treatment for a broken arm received as a result of a fall on the icy walk near her home.

They say no medicine was given until Saturday, when the attending physician ordered a cathartic, and that soon after, the attending nurse stated, Mrs. Eschmann became unconscious and remained in that state until she died yesterday. After the woman was given the medicine, it is said, she told her husband she thought she had accidentally been poisoned, and that she would die.

Dr. C. N. Suttner, attending physician, says the woman died of acute inflammation of the kidneys. At the hospital it is said the medicine given Mrs. Eschmann was common salts.
