

ADVANTAGES TO BE DERIVED FROM WOOL PRODUCTION LEARNED
 C. B. Eyer of Los Angeles Spends Several Days in State Inspecting Conditions
POSSIBILITIES A SURPRISE

Visitor Marvels at Wonderful Chances Which Loom in Oregon; Scenery Is Highly Praised.

C. B. Eyer, of Los Angeles, has been several days in Oregon inspecting woolen products as the representative of the chamber of commerce in his home city. His report on this matter will show the great advantages for both growth of wool and its manufacture on the Pacific coast, including Oregon.

"I am struck by the wonderful possibilities of your state to attract the wealthy tourist travel," said Mr. Eyer, at the Multnomah hotel, just before his departure for southern California. "You have such magnificent scenery, rivers, mountains, trees. The beauty of the Columbia is unknown to the people of the east. Why, we go a hundred miles in Los Angeles to get under a few pine or fir trees."

Good Roads Needed.
 "We haven't anything like the scenic advantages in southern California that you have. All you need is more good roads. We are alive to the necessity and advantages of good roads in California now. I see that some good roads are being built up and down the Columbia. Like ours they will pay for themselves many times over in increased values and in the attraction of travelers and tourists. I have seen all the best scenery of Switzerland and most of Europe. Oregon has more. Good scenery with good roads to get to it easily brings in men with money, first to see, and then to stay. We have proved it in California. The state has spent $18,000,000 on a highway there. Los Angeles has voted $3,500,000 in addition to build connecting county roads. Riverside, San Bernardino and San Diego counties have each voted over a million each—all in addition to the state fund. We have built a road in one place costing $500,000 and got on top of a hill with a fine view. If we had some of your waterfalls and great trees and wonderful rivers to show from that hill we would spend half a million to get it in shape for automobiles to reach it. We need to build hundreds of miles of good roads in and around Oregon. Good scenery and scenic views as you offer the tourist trade we have in Los Angeles will pour in here."

Economy Is Shown.
 "They will spend money, build, invest, develop, attract population and produce the same effect as we have had in Los Angeles. That is a realization that good roads pay, and pay well, when you have the scenic view with it that puts the rest of this continent in the background."
 "It was told of the scenic roads being built on the Columbia, and of the roads in southern Oregon. 'Yes,' he replied. 'I have heard of them. I think they are all right, and will do for a start, but the best roads you possibly can. Let the roads match the scenery. Why, men come to southern California and spend a million dollars to create a home by a bit of scenery. They will do the same here if you just get the roads around through the country so they can see it. Then they stay here. Then they invest their money here, and their presence and demands bring population. I must go back to California, but when some of these roads along the Columbia are finished I am coming back with a steamer load of tourists and their automobiles. Some of them will remain here, I am sure."

Emery Will Get Damages After All

Olympia, Wash., Jan. 9.—Contrary to first reports, H. P. Emery, Portland theatrical manager, will recover the $9000 awarded him as damages by a Pierce county jury. The bag shot by a paroled patient from the state insane asylum. While the supreme court set aside the judgment as to the superintendent of the asylum, and the stepfather of the assailant, a majority of the court affirmed the judgment against the mother of the shooter, and on her appeal she secured a surety company bond which means the judgment must be paid.
