TOWN TOPICS

World Annual Notes.—Alleging that M. C. Thorsen, vice president of the Multnomah State bank of Lents, secured two notes and mortgages for a total of $45,000 without consideration.

College Club Planned.—The conference of committees from college organizations held at the Central Library last Wednesday, resulted in a unanimous vote for the formation of a college club.

Bound Over to Grand Jury.—C. T. Wilson was bound over to the grand jury by District Judge Bell yesterday to answer to a statutory charge brought by Joseph Taylor for photographs and transparencies for the San Francisco fair on condition that 10 of the photographs be turned over to the county when the fair ends.

Registration Office Will Be Open.—To permit those who have become naturalized since the people passed the law last November, requiring full citizenship as a condition of a legal voter to register in accordance with the law permitting clearing of registration records passed by the Legislature, the registration office will be open Tuesday morning for 15 days.

Accused of Stealing Chickens.—William O'Connell and Edward M. Tobin were arrested yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Phillips, Christoffersen, Beckman and Anderson in the registration office with eight miles east of Portland on the Base Line road. The chickens are valued at $100 and the deal will be a farmer living three miles south of Gresham, also charges that they stole 40 blooded chickens from him.

Jury Recommends Leniency.—Failure of Joe Simon to properly label salted cans of fish brought before the jury his conviction on a charge of selling misbranded food yesterday in District Judge Jones' court. The jury recommended leniency, saying no fraud appeared to be intended, and Simon was fined $25, the fine being remitted. The goods, it is said, were salted from his home after they had come damaged by water and the fish had been soaked off. No testimony was given to show that they were in any way spoiled, the only question being the failure of Simon to properly brand the cans.

Religion and Peace.—At the regular weekly meeting of the World Peace association in hall A, Central Library, Eleventh and Yamhill streets at 3 p. m. today, the Bahainan message of peace from the United States to the world, by Charles Mason Reamey of Washington, D. C. The subject to be discussed is "Religion a Factor of World Peace." Instrumental music will be given by Miss Vivian de Lory. Mrs. Lillian de Lory will lead congregational singing of original peace songs, including the new "Disarmament Song," to be sung today for the first time.

Murray Hobson Convicted.—Murray Hobson, about 30 years old, was convicted yesterday by a jury in Circuit Judge Davis' court of a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a 16-year-old girl. He was charged with inducing the girl to come to the city from her home in Haley, Or., with him through false pretenses, and with having outraged her here. The jury deliberated but a few minutes. Attorney George C. Brownell, of Oregon City, defended Hobson.

School Board Files Answer.—Answering the suit of Mrs. Maude L. Richards to secure reinstatement as a teacher in the Trades School from which she was dismissed because of marriage last month, the school board this morning alleged that she had violated the rule of the board against marriage of women teachers during a school year, and had broken her contract with the board by coming up for trial before Circuit Judge Morrow, at some date yet to be set.

To Present Drama.—The drama, "The Newly Married Couple," by Bjornstjerne Bjornson, the great Norwegian dramatist, is to be presented March 13, at the Lincoln high school, by Professor Archibald Reddie, of the University of Oregon and members of his class in dramatic interpretation. This will be the first time the people of Portland will be given an opportunity to see the play. The proceeds from the play are to go to the fund for a University of Oregon scholarship, which is to be given each year by the pupils of the Lincoln high school to some member of the senior class.

Indiana Society to Meet.—The Indiana society of Oregon will meet Monday night at 8 o'clock in room A, of the Central Library. E. A. Baker, a former state representative of Elkhart county, Indiana, will give an address on "Our Native Land." A musical program is being prepared by Mrs. J. C. O'Day. It being the anniversary of Washington's birthday, an effort is being made to feature the Father of Our Country in a part of the evening's entertainment.

Reed College Services.—The speaker for the vesper services at Reed college this afternoon, at 4 o'clock, will be Dr. P. L. Loveland. Special music will be rendered, consisting of prelude Andante (Beethoven); aria, "It is Enough"; recitative, "Arie, Elijah"; aria, "O, Rest in the Lord"; chorus, "O, Rest in the Lord"; and "The Lord is My Shepherd." The choir will sing "Elijah," by Miss Clara Wuest and Harry Wembridge.

Estate Filed for Probate.—Two estates were filed for probate yesterday. John Carlson, who died February 15, left $1800 in property to his son and two daughters, according to the petition for probate. Fay H. Lewis, who died February 17, left $250 worth of property, according to the petition of his widow, a resident of Seattle, for probate of his estate.

County Provides for Pictures.—The county commissioners yesterday voted $1900 additional to the $1455 already allowed for photographs and transparencies for the San Francisco fair on condition that 10 of the photographs be turned over to the county when the fair ends. The pictures, 101 of the Columbia River Highway and are greatly enlarged from negatives.

DAWN ON LARCH MOUNTAIN REPAYS CLIMBERS' EFFORTS

Mazamas and Friends, After Night Ascent, Greet Day-on Summit of Wooded Slope.

With the development of the plan to construct a trail from Multnomah Falls to the top of Larch mountain, as one of the sidetrips from the Columbia highway, Portland people have begun to take an active interest in this beautiful wooded peak, and last Sunday the broadcast call of the Mazamas for a junket to its summit was largely answered.

Traveling conditions were hard. The trip was made under the greatest disadvantages. The fatigue that one suffers through lack of sleep. Members of the party had to stay up all night and all the next day. However, 110 started out, and of this number, 101 reached the top. The summit is a rocky peak that stands at an altitude of 4045 feet.

To give it a more intimate aspect to the climb, the Mazamas have plainly visible from most parts of the city. It is almost as prominent an object from Portland "view property" as Mount Hood.

Some of the 110 starting from Portland were dyed-in-the-wool Mazamas—those who can walk all day and all night without a rest. There were a rather larger portion of near-Mazamas, but the big majority of the junketers consisted of persons who were climbing for the first time.

At present only one trail exists up Larch mountain which a large party can follow. That is the 9-mile route which leads from the top of Hood, to leave Bridal Veil, at an altitude of less than 7500 feet above sea level, you climb practically all the way. Last year, the Mazamas had a trail leading to the top of Larch mountain, but it was not a good resting place, despite the fall of the early morning air.

The Mazamas' last Sunday, after dozens of trips to the top of Larch mountain, they were able to see the crevasses of Hood's glaciers. The plainly visible, but little known Silver Star range of mountains, lying northeast of Vancouver, and almost north of Larch mountain in Washington, came in for much attention.

you are on top of the rocky points, and the whole world seems to be entirely underneath your feet. The tops of these rocky pinnacles are not more than 10 feet wide. You have come up one side. The chasm of the other side begins at your very feet. One could take a single step from the northeast side of these rocks, and never touch a thing for 1200 feet. The view is so exhilarating that most climbers do not at first see this cliff, but they catch their breath as they peer over the perpendicular walls, hundreds of feet down.

Of the two pinnacles, the one further west is the highest and only from it can Portland be seen over the tree tops. This point is less than 10 feet square. When the United States forest service had a fire lookout station on this point several years ago, a substantial wooden ladder was placed up this pinnacle, and it is still there, offering easy access for every climber.

From the top of Larch mountain, one has practically unobstructed view in all directions. The morning there was not the slightest trace of mist or smoke to mar the crystal clearness. Looking westward the "climbers" could see where they had a fire lookout station on this point several years ago, a substantial wooden ladder was placed up this pinnacle, and it is still there, offering easy access for every climber.

Most of the crowd started on the return trip as early as possible for Farmer in order to avoid the wet melting snow of mid-morning. The return trip to Portland was made late the same afternoon.

Inquiring into the possibilities of Larch mountain as a park, leaders of the Mazamas have been assured by representatives of the lumbering company now cutting timber from the upper slopes of the mountain that the natural timbered beauty of the top will never be disturbed.

Our bridgework has been brought to the highest state of perfection. The teeth on this bridge are interchangeable, and without removing from the mouth.

through the forest from the north and the east. Whether the timber along the route of this trail is to be cut or not is uncertain.

Brazil Orders Tank Cars. Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 20.—The Midtown Car Works has booked an order for a number of steel tank cars for the Anglo-Mexican Petroleum Products company, of Brazil.
