Educational Ideals Past and Present.
 "Educational Ideals, Past and Present" was the topic of a very interesting address delivered recently by Assistant Superintendent D. A. A. Grout at a meeting of the Elks' Educational Association when "home coming" day was celebrated. Mr. Grout said in part:

"In the old days we had great stress upon mental alertness. There were many exercises whose sole purpose was to develop ability to think quickly and grasp new situations intelligently. In our modern and language expression, either oral or written, our objectives were accuracy and speed. Much time was given to developing the mastery of our country and flag with many special exercises and discussions on what constitutes true patriotism. Every effort was made to teach the boys and girls to be independent and self-reliant. There were, also, a few beginnings in concrete instruction. These were, however, restricted to what could be done in the classroom. While there is now no doubt but that we made too much of books, no one has any reason today to be ashamed of the men and women who were children in school then."

"The education of any period should fit the needs of its own generation. The educational training of the little child of the imagination of the people as no other program in education has ever done."

"The task of developing and perfecting a system of vocational education is the most difficult problem in all the history of education. Everyone is certain of something that should be done, but no one is very sure just what or how or how much to do. There are many plans and suggestions and experiments and out of these true progress will come. Any concrete scheme must include trade and commerce, the industries and agriculture. Portland is making a very creditable showing in this direction."

"The property capital of the country is being and has been abundantly developed. The human capital—the brains and muscles of the people—is, it has been estimated, five times the value of all other resources combined. In developing our physical resources, we have neglected the human thing, relatively, the really great thing—the development of our human capital—remains to be much more fully done. That this should be done without saying, for the home, the school, society and the state are co-operating as never before."

"We know that employers who have remained out will now come under the provision of the new law, because of the amendment embodying differential classification," he said. The law is now in much better shape to afford protection to the workers and to give equitable rates to employers. There are many features of it that could be pointed out. "Several farmers have told us they will now come under the compensation law, and the commissioners feel that compensation has come to stay in Oregon."

"No, Ruth, Let's Both Get Our Things ON CREDIT!"

"I rode down on the car this morning with the girl across the street, Ruth, and she had on the dearest new checked Coat I ever saw. 'And what do you think she told me? You know we've always admired her clothes so much. Well, SHE BUYS THEM ALL AT CHERRY'S AND PAYS FOR THEM BY THE WEEK!'"

"CHERRY'S have a brand new shipment of Spring Coats in checks and covert cloth—hardly out of the boxes, and the styles are the very latest and simply charming. They're in white and all the stylish new shades. Let's go to CHERRY'S in the morning, Ruth. I heard all about Cherry's Suits too, this morning—how they're short as to coats and full as to skirts and of gabardine and poplin chiefly, in sand and blue and all the other good colors. CHERRY'S store is on Washington street, 289-291, in the Pittock block. (Adv.)"

Little Stories for Bedtime

BY THORNTON W. BURROES
 (Copyright, 1915, by J. G. Lloyd.)

Happy Jack Squirrel Eas a Happy Thought.
 Frightened and breathless, running with all his might from Shadow the Weasel, Happy Jack Squirrel was in despair. He didn't know what to do or where to go. The last time he had run from Shadow he had run to Farmer Brown's Boy, who had happened to be near, and Farmer Brown's Boy had chased Shadow the Weasel away. But now it was too early in the morning for him to expect to meet Farmer Brown's Boy. In fact, just round, red Mr. Sun had hardly kicked his bedclothes off yet, and Happy Jack was very sure that Farmer Brown's Boy was still asleep.

Now most of us are creatures of habit. We do the things that we have been in the habit of doing, and do it without thinking anything about it. That is why good habits are such a blessing. Happy Jack Squirrel is just like the rest of us. He has habits, and he is in the habit of getting his breakfast at Farmer Brown's house every morning. So now, when he began to run from Shadow the Weasel, he just naturally ran in the direction of Farmer Brown's house from force of habit. In fact he was half way there before he realized in which direction he was running.

Right then a thought came to him. It gave him a wee bit of hope and seemed to help him run just a little faster. If the window of Farmer Brown's Boy's room was open he would run in there and perhaps Shadow the Weasel wouldn't dare to follow. How he did hope that window would be open! He knew that it was his only chance. He wasn't quite sure that it really was a chance, for Shadow was such a cunning fellow that he might not be afraid to follow him right in, but it was worth trying.

Along the stone wall beside the Old Orchard raced Happy Jack to the doorway of Farmer Brown's house, and after him ran Shadow the Weasel, and Shadow looked as if he were enjoying himself. No doubt he was. He knew just as well as Happy Jack did that there was small chance of meeting Farmer Brown's Boy so early in the morning, so he felt very sure how that chase was going to end, and that when it did end he would breakfast on squirrel.

By the time Happy Jack reached the doorway Shadow was only a few jumps behind him and Happy Jack was pretty well out of breath. He didn't stop to look to see if the way was clear. There wasn't time for that. Besides, there could be no great danger in inspecting the companies of the Third regiment outside of Portland. The order of inspection will be as follows: Tuesday, March 2, Company K, Corvallis; Wednesday, March

He took his time about it, for he knew by the way Happy Jack had run that he was pretty nearly at the end of his strength. "He never'll get out of this tree," thought Shadow as he started to climb it. He fully expected to find Happy Jack huddled in a miserable little heap somewhere near the top. Just imagine how surprised he was when he discovered that Happy Jack wasn't to be seen. He rubbed his angry little red eyes, and they grew angrier and redder than before.

"Must be a hollow up here somewhere," he muttered. "I'll just follow the scent of his feet and that will lead me to him."

But when that scent led him out on a branch, the tip of which brushed against Farmer Brown's house, Shadow got another surprise. There was no sign of Happy Jack. He couldn't have reached the roof. There was no place he could have gone unless Shadow stared across at a window which was open about two inches. "He couldn't have!" muttered Shadow. "He wouldn't dare! He couldn't have!"

But Happy Jack had. He had gone inside that window.

Wants Cruise Ordered.

May Be Given Assistant.
 If the duties of Lieutenant Smith continue to be increased by reason of the requirements of the naval department he will probably be granted an assistant, especially if the enlistments increase. Every Friday evening on the cruiser Boston he instructs the officers in navigation, latitude sailing, principle of astronomy and the high mathematics pertaining to naval operation.
