

THE WHOLE WORLD IS INTERESTED IN BELGIUM AND WHAT BEFALLS HER

AN ELDERLY BELGIAN COUPLE IN ENGLAND
This venerable man and woman were lucky to find a comfortable home in England when the fortunes of war compelled them to flee their native land, where they had lived their lives in peace and contentment for many, many years.

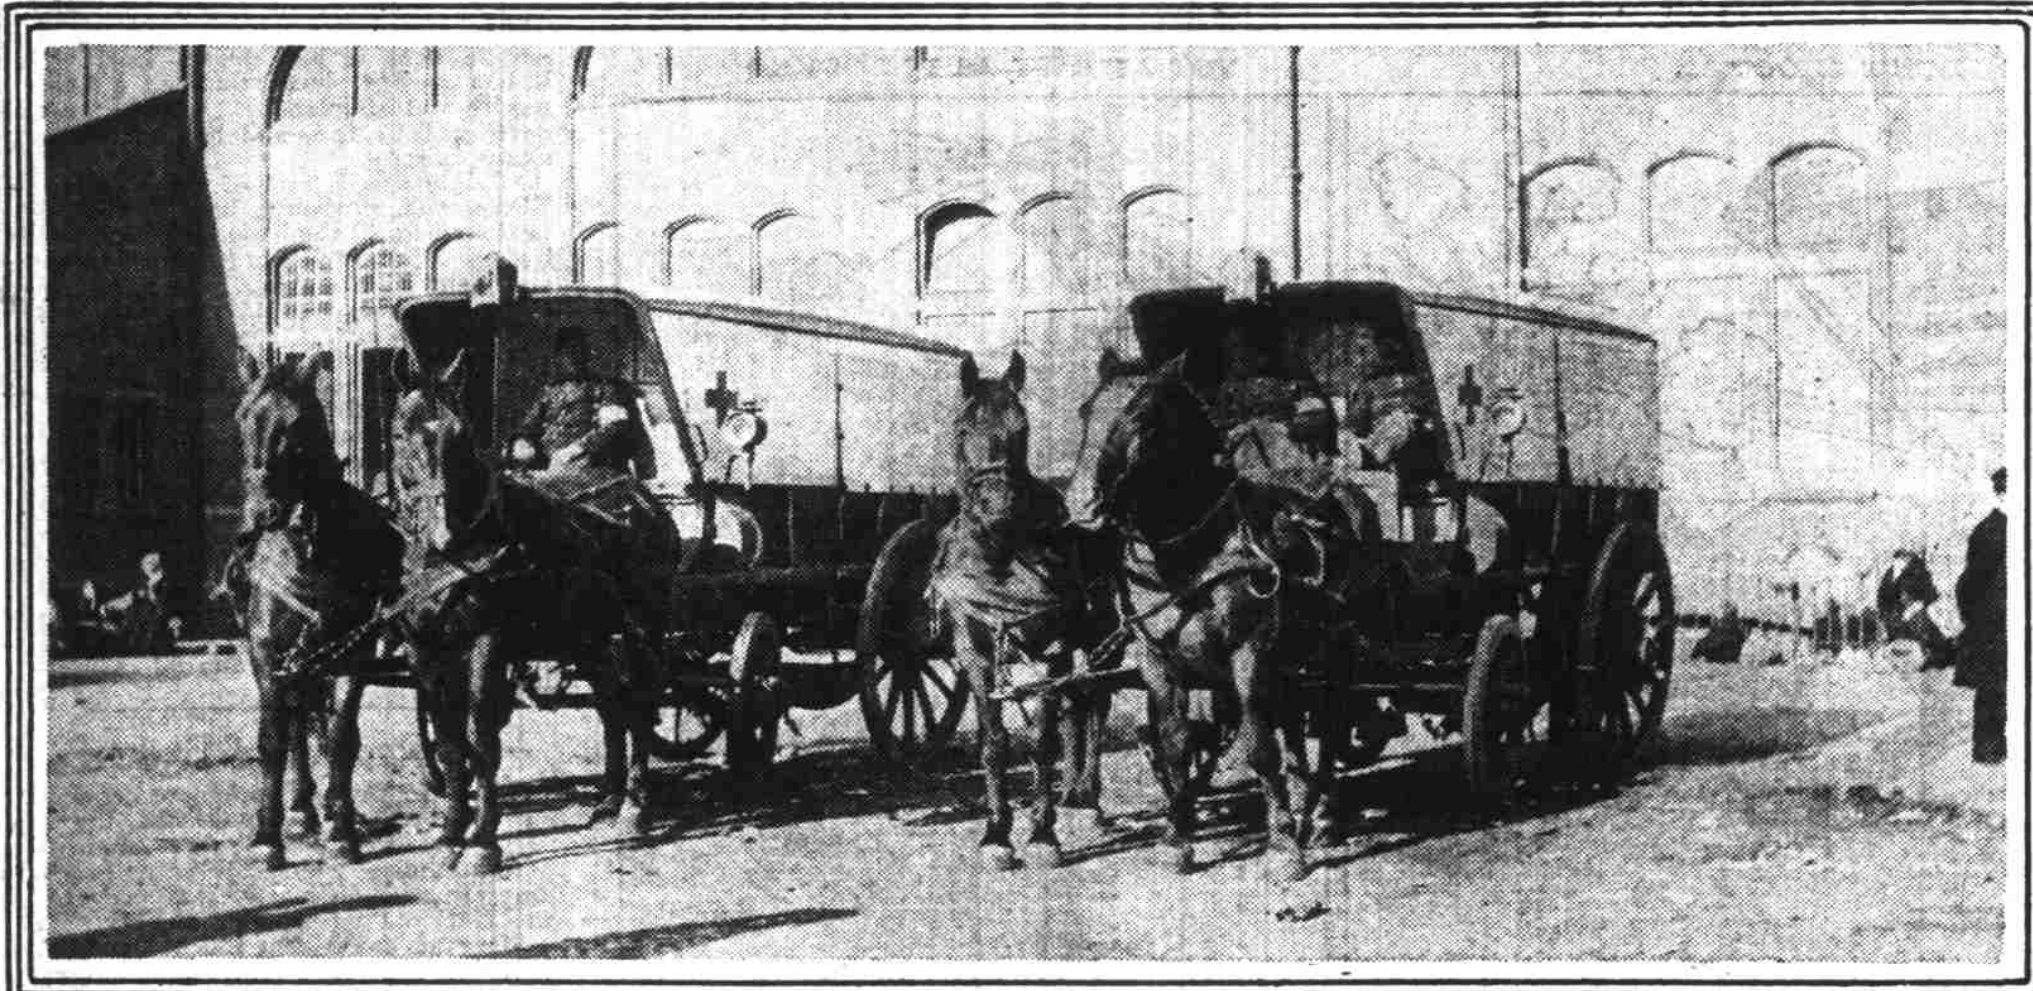

A BELGIAN BICYCLE SQUAD ON THE MARCH
This photograph is of chief interest because of the historic interest attached to it. This bicycle corps is shown passing through Antwerp en route to Ostend during the earlier stages of the war, since which time most of the men have been killed.

INSPIRING PATRIOTISM

An old Belgian shows his grandson a photograph of King Albert, whom all Belgians love and for whom they have fought valiantly in the resistance of encroachments by the Germans.

—Photographs by Courtesy Press Department Eastman Kodak Company.

DUTCH RED CROSS AMBULANCES

Although attached to the Dutch army, these ambulances have performed a humane service since the war began in the transportation of feeble and crippled Belgians from the war zone to places of safety in The Netherlands.

HOMELESS, HOPELESS BELGIANS FIND REFUGE IN HOLLAND

Here they are—men, women and children—with all their worldly possessions in a few bundles, suddenly put down in a strange country to seek a living because their native land is sacrificed to gratify the ends of European kingship and statecraft.

SHELL DAMAGE IN MALINES

The fact that Malines suffered bombardment three times during the earlier stages of the war, makes this photograph of a ruined business house the more interesting.