

ANOTHER ROAD IS THE RESULT OF ENTRANCE OF VALLEY SOUTHERN

Prosperity Strikes Clackamas County From Oregon City South to Mt. Angel.

LINE RUNS INTO TIMBER

D. L. Trullinger, of Union Mills, Will Own and Operate the System—He Has Completed Surveys.

(Special to The Journal.) Oregon City, Or., March 20.—Prosperity riding upon the rails of the Willamette Southern railway, has invaded Clackamas county. Everywhere along the line, from Oregon City south to Mount Angel, there is evidence that a railroad was only needed to unlock the door to the rich store of natural resources.

The first big enterprise to be started along the line is the building of the Union Mills railroad, a branch line running east from the Willamette Valley Southern to Union Mills, a distance of two miles. Its initial terminal will be at the intersection of the Willamette Valley Southern and the Molalla river.

This railroad is being built and will be owned exclusively by D. L. Trullinger, a contractor who has completed the surveys and procured all his rights of way, and actual construction will commence in a short time.

The new road will be built for the principal purpose of bringing out the products of Mr. Trullinger's lumber and flouring mills. However, the country into which it is being built is one of the rich lumber districts of Oregon, and it is expected the line will pay for itself as a common carrier.

Mr. Trullinger intends to operate his road with steam trains. He says that the work can be completed in a while if it is only the intention to build the Union Mills railroad two miles, this is only the beginning. Already people living on sections of Union Mills and in Colton have promised enough capital to extend the railroad several miles farther.

The Union Mills road is the first feeder line to be started from the Willamette Valley Southern. It is a fulfillment of the prediction made in the Journal three years ago, when the Willamette Valley Southern was still in its promotion stage, that a railroad, Oregon City, south through Clackamas county, would be built for much railroad construction in this county.

Captain Rawlings Is "Kid."

Oregon City, Or., March 20.—One of the most active men of his age is Captain W. Rawlings, of Medford station. Captain Rawlings is a "mere youth" of 82 summers, and he thinks nothing of turning hand springs, kicking above his head, lifting 100 pounds with one hand and performing other feats of strength and agility. He stands straight and erect and has maintained the same weight—within a few pounds of 175 pounds—for the last 62 years.

Captain Rawlings received his military title during the Civil war, when he was a Confederate battle flag. He captured the enemy's battle flag, and the hands from the Confederate color bear at the battle of Black River, Miss., in 1862, during the campaign which led up to the siege of Vicksburg.

At the age of 75 years, Captain Rawlings entered a physical contest at Medford, Or., with a number of men many years his junior.

Busy Week in School.

Oregon City, Or., March 20.—A busy week has just been completed by Superintendent Calavan among the district schools of Clackamas county. In company with M. S. Pittman, of the state normal, and Supervisors Wedder and McCormick, a tour of many of the schools has been made.

During the week, four of the popular spelling bees were held. The last one was Thursday afternoon at the Clark's. Teams from the Alberta, Upper Highland, Schuebel and Timber Grove contested against the home team. The winners were Misses Ruth Carlyle, of Upper Highland, Ava Miller, of Alberta, Ruth Pope and Ellen McIntyre of Alberta.

Building Nearly Ready.

Oregon City, Or., March 20.—The new two-story cement building of E. W. Greene, at Clackamas, is nearing completion and will be ready for occupancy about April 1. It has a full basement, ground floor fitted with modern conveniences for four stores and a large dance hall on the second floor. The structure will cost $16,000 when completed, according to Mr. Greene's statement.

Miller has returned from an inspection trip over the line from Astoria to Siletz, which ultimately will run from Independence into the Siletz country, and states that at present the road is being probably the largest school rally ever held in this part of Washington county. Estimates place the attendance at about 500 school children and patrons. They came by whole schools for miles, and filled the large pavilion to capacity.

Prisoner's Estate Is Myth.

Salem, Or., March 20.—J. H. Davis, an ex-convict, has been "working" Portland attorneys, according to word reaching the penitentiary, by representing that George Webber, a life-terminer from St. Helens, needs legal assistance in looking after a vast amount of property. Davis, according to reports, has engaged several lawyers and in each instance negotiated a loan of a few dollars. Letters from the attorneys, addressed to Webber, have been coming in, and the estate which needs looking after, Davis has served his term, so the prison officials can do nothing regarding the matter.

Veterinarian's Case Up.

Salem, Or., March 20.—H. M. Thomas, a veterinarian of Oregon City, has been practicing in violation of the act against unlicensed practitioners given out today by Attorney General Brown. Governor Withcomb requested the opinion, Thomas having asked to have his license annulled without taking an examination. It was provided in the 1905 act that persons practicing at that time could have their licenses annulled by application by making application for license 60 days after its approval by the governor. Thomas failed to do so.

Valley Exhibit at Fair Is for All

Action of Clackamas and Polk Counties in Effort for Individual Advertising Doesn't Meet With Approval.

Dallas, Or., March 20.—After spending several hundred dollars for literature and appropriating money for the salary and expenses of personal representatives at the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco, two of the counties of the Willamette valley find their money will be wasted. At a meeting of the directors of the Willamette Valley Exposition association at Albany a few days ago, protest was made that Clackamas county had asked county representatives were boosting their respective counties to the exclusion of the others of the valley, and a resolution was passed prohibiting individual county boosting at the association's exhibit at the exposition. The resolution was bitterly opposed by the representatives of Clackamas and Polk, which have had printed several thousand county booklets, but they were outvoted and the literature will have to be thrown into the discard.
