

COUNTERFEITER WILL ENTER PENITENTIARY FOR THE THIRD TIME

"Zeb" Harshner Has Already Spent Nearly 21 Years of His Life Behind Bars.

HE ADMITS HE IS GUILTY

Court Passes Sentence of Seven Years on Man Who Tried to Shield Others.

"Zeb" Harshner, counterfeiter, who has spent nearly 21 of his 55 years of life in prison, will serve at least seven more years of his expected mortality behind the bars.

That was the term at the government penitentiary at McNeil island given Harshner yesterday by Judge Rudkin in United States district court. Harshner pleaded guilty, and tried to shield J. S. Stevens, 40, who was sentenced to six years at the island, and Robert Baker, 39, who received 10 days in jail.

Harshner, Stevens and Baker were arrested at Marshfield by William Glover, United States secret service agent. In the house where Harshner lived, and which was rented for him by Stevens, were found more than 50 counterfeit half dollar pieces.

Plaster Moulds Found. The fives were not plated, and the counterfeiting outfit was short only the materials for plating.

Glover found that Stevens had bought old type-metal, which he used to make bogus coins, from a Marshfield printing office. A box of anti-mony had been secured from a Portland wholesale drug house. There were nearly 100 plaster moulds.

Baker was not charged with counterfeiting, but with having had knowledge of a felony and having failed and refused to disclose that knowledge to government officials. He was given a severe lecture by Judge Rudkin.

Glover found that Baker had been acquainted with Harshner and Stevens for about a week before their arrest, and that he had passed one of the counterfeit halves at a Marshfield saloon.

Serves Two Sentences.

Harshner already has served two sentences, one of 10 months and one of eight years, for counterfeiting. He served 12 years at Salem for complicity in a train robbery near Troutdale with what was known as the "Bill" Minor gang.

Stevens served a sentence at Salem for cattle stealing in Klamath county, and the theory of federal officials is that he and Harshner became acquainted there, and that his knowledge of Harshner's ability as a counterfeiter led him to send for Harshner to engage in the "business" at Marshfield.

Evidence was introduced to show that Harshner and Stevens intended to pass their wares at the San Francisco fair. Stevens served a sentence at Coquille for bootlegging shortly before his arrest at Marshfield by Glover.

Bullet in Brain Is Not Bothering Her

New Jersey Woman Quits Hospital and Doctor Says She Can Have Lead Removed Later On.

Montclair, N. J., March 20.—Mrs. Anna Hutchins, whose husband shot her five times last January 14 and then shot and killed himself, left the Mountainside hospital with a bullet still imbedded in her brain and another in her left arm.

Nevertheless Dr. Joseph Bellas, house physician at the hospital, said that Mrs. Hutchins would not be troubled by either bullet. The one in her arm will be removed when she is stronger, and the physician said nature would heal the wound in the brain. Any attempt to remove the bullet, he said, probably would result in Mrs. Hutchins' death.

The only ill effect of the wounds are a slight impediment in speech and weakness in the right side due to the destruction of nerve centers by the bullet in the brain.

The shooting of Mrs. Hutchins was the culmination of married discord that has existed for a year, and Hutchins had left home twice.

Two paintings of a collection of 25 pictures by American artists now on view at the Portland Museum of Art. Top—"Late Afternoon," by Paul Daugherty. Bottom—"The Little Bush Girl," by Robert Henri.

An exhibition of more than passing interest is now on at the Art Museum, corner Fifth and Taylor streets, where 25 pictures, each one by a well known American artist, are hung for three weeks, prior to being sent to San Francisco, where they will be hung in the exposition buildings. To western people who are seeing little of the newer interpretations of art, many of the pictures shown in this exhibition will be somewhat startling. The getting away from the old style of painting, with all its infinite details and elaborate handling, is told in these pictures more forcefully than mere words can tell. The artist's aim for simplicity is depicted in a unmistakable manner.

The portrait "Little Irish Girl," by Robert Henri, is among the most interesting of all the pictures, both because Mr. Henri is so well known and on account of the wonderful simplicity and directness of his handling of the subject. Mr. Henri is intensely interested in modern life, his aim is to paint in the most direct manner possible and from the standpoint of the people rather than from the standpoint of the artist. In the picture displayed is painted with the fewest possible strokes, in fact many places the canvass is not even covered, yet life speaks from every curve and every line.

The exhibition contains no more striking picture than that by Jonas Lie, "From the Bridge," showing New York harbor from Brooklyn bridge. The vivid coloring and the life which the artist has given this study make it exceedingly interesting. Mr. Lie, a Norwegian, came to this country at a very early age and has acquired all of his brush skill here, hence he is

CHAS. E. HUGHES FOR PRESIDENT IS THE REPUBLICAN SCHEME

Candidacy of Supreme Court Justice Said to Be Plan of G. O. P. Managers.

WILL DISCARD JOKERS

"Favorite Son" Booms Will Proceed So Far, But no Further; Then Enter Hughes.

(WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE JOURNAL, March 20)—The Republican nominee for president will be Justices Charles E. Hughes of the United States supreme court, the man, one of the few who ever did it, who refused the nomination last time.

There's a prediction that will bear watching. The former New York governor, who accepted Taft's tender of a place among the judicial might and then refused to be a candidate against him when it seemed certain he could have the nomination for the taking, is on the cards of the men who will control the next nomination. Not on the cards that lie on the table, perhaps, but on the cards that linger up the sleeves of the managers.

You don't hear much about Justice Hughes at this time and probably you won't for a long time, not as long, indeed, as the managers can. What you hear is: Burton, Herrick, Willis, Falbanks, Weeks, Borah, Mann, Before the fall of next year you'll hear considerable about several others, most of them "favorite sons."

The latest to appear is one James E. Watson, of Indiana, a lightweight so light, presidentially speaking, that the very thought of him, at least, James E. is actively working for the Indiana endorsement as against Charles W. Fairbanks, but it is not because this bright young ex-congressman of ill-smelling mullah connection, takes his candidacy seriously, though he may believe he can defeat his wooden competitor for the Indiana votes. There is reason to believe Watson knows what the program is, knows that he not only cannot be selected, but cannot be nominated, and he is playing the game for the Republican managers. It would be strange if he did not in view of the degree to which he has been on the inside in the past. And while it can be held up as being a bluff, it never has taken the American people very seriously, on the other hand it cannot be charged that he has taken himself any too seriously, either.

So it is safe to assume that Watson knows what schedule has been arranged and is merely helping it along. His part is to keep Indiana interested in the idea of having an Indiana man for a candidate before the national convention, with the votes duly bound up and safe until the proper time for release comes.

Herrick, Burton and Willis should accomplish as much in Ohio; each of the three may or may not consider his prospects real; the managers do not. So it is likely that Weeks, in Massachusetts, Mann in Illinois, Borah of the West, and the others to be brought forward in due time. The managers want all the favorite sons, with instructed delegations, possible, to get the votes in advance of the convention.

With the national convention safely at loggerheads over the various favorite sons, the nomination of Justice Hughes could be reasonably easy to bring about.

And the funny thing about it all is that the managers don't want Hughes because they like him or his ways; they want him solely because they think he can win. With all the talk of returning conservatism and of Democratic disintegration, in their hearts they realize that a candidate to win must be going on the wing of Barnes of Hughes' own state, who find it impossible to like Hughes for his own sake, are making themselves like him for the sake of the party. They realize that their own kind of man cannot win, that the best, cleanest and ablest must be put forward; to fit that description they have centered on Hughes.

They see a ray of hope in his judicial temperament; one experience with the judicial temperament as embodied in President Taft rather pleased them. They know Hughes is one of the two or three regular Republicans who can win back an appreciable number of Progressives. As they see it, it is Hughes or four years more of Democracy.

Concerning Recess Appointments. Look for the minimum number of recess appointments by President Wilson, probably spending the recess appointments do not pay. Nothing so serves to separate a president from his party in congress, say old stagers, as recess appointments.

You noted the news the other day that the president had put the bars up against callers for three weeks. The international situation was given as the sole reason for this. But said old stagers say another very good reason could be suggested without impropriety, viz: To give those congressmen who remain, time to leave Washington. Nearly always before he leaves, the congressman calls to pay his respects to the president, and before he leaves the president he usually manages to leave a suggestion of something he wants.

"Rats!" "Rats!" That is the present presidential epithet. Having been pestered by a caller the other day for some statement regarding the tariff effort of the New York Sun to make a mountain out of a letter to business men, given by the president to an agent of the Department of Commerce, Wilson let go of his temper for a moment. The question of what the dignified executive says on the golf course when he slices the ball, was at last answered. It is "Rats!"

That one legged colored man voted eight times in the Terre Haute election is one of the entertaining charges of the district attorney at the fraud trial.

LAYS IN SUPPLY OF FOOD. Venice, March 20.—In order that a food supply may be available for the people of Budapest no matter what conditions may arise in the future, the city council has expended $3,750,000 for provisions, chiefly wheat, rye, barley, rice, cattle and pigs. The municipal bakery has arranged to supply 100,000 pounds of bread daily. The wholesale prices of meat have advanced twopenny (4 cents) a pound on the Vienna cattle market.
