Vocational Education Discussed.

One hundred and seven professional and volunteer social workers gathered last evening in the crystal room of Hotel Benson, the occasion being the monthly dinner of the Social Workers' club, and the subject for the evening being "Vocational Education and Its Relation to Social Services." Mrs. H. E. Boudurant was chairman of the committee on arrangements, and the meeting was the largest and one of the most interesting yet held by this popular club. B. F. Irvine presided and introduced as the first speaker of the evening W. T. Bawden, who is connected with the national bureau of education in Washington, D. C. Mr. Bawden is making a tour of the west in the interest of vocational education, and it was along this line that he spoke.

"Industrial education is the training of a boy or girl to earn their living with the hands," he said. "A girl may be able to trim hats and a boy may be able to operate an engine and they are industrially educated, but they are not vocationally educated."

"Vocational education is a broad scheme of training, a training of the mind and the morals, as well as the hands. First comes the education for humanity, then the education for duties of citizenship and the education that will enable you to earn your living."

"Just now, when we are hearing so many harrowing tales of child labor, I sometimes wonder if there is not another side to the question. Are not children better off working in properly regulated mills and factories than running the streets? I think they are. Fifty per cent of the boys and girls of our country leave school before the high school is reached, and it is only 50 per cent that furnishes the social worker his problems."

L. R. Alderman was the next speaker. He said that he realized fully that those with whom the social worker comes in contact are the ones whom the school has failed to do its duty by, and that a consciousness of this very thing is the thing that has brought about Portland's effort at vocational training. He then had flashed on the screen a score of more of pictures showing some of the unusual activities in the local schools.

Mrs. Wilma Chandler Crouse made a brief report on the moral side of the jitney question.

Y. W. C. A. Board Meets.

The meeting of the board of directors of the Y. W. C. A. was held yesterday with a large attendance. The work of the travelers' aid department came up for discussion inasmuch as the forthcoming summer promises such great activity in this department. Although travel is light at this time compared to what it will be later, 633 persons received special care at the hands of the travelers' aid workers last month. There were 68 children traveling alone who were given attention. The matter of additional workers for the rush months was taken under advisement.

Mrs. Robert W. Lewis, chairman of the North Portland branch, reported excellent work being done there.

To Discuss Child's Artistic Sense.

"The Child's Artistic Sense in Development and Culture" will be the subject of an illustrated lecture to be given tomorrow at 2:30 at the Art Museum, corner Fifth and Taylor streets, this being one of the lectures of the course presented by the parents' educational bureau of the Oregon Congress of Mothers. The lecture will be illustrated and will be free to all mothers interested.

Holiday Parent-Teachers to Meet.

The Holiday Parent-Teacher association will meet Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Mrs. W. A. Elliot will give a paper on "The School in the Home," and Otto Wedemeyer will give a group of songs. Plans will be made for the "Mother Goose" entertainment, which is to be given by the school children, under Parent-Teacher auspices, April 2 and 3.

College Women Discuss Club.

A large delegation of college women gathered yesterday afternoon at central library in response to a call for the organization of a college women's club.

Woman's Building Meet Postponed.

The meeting of the Woman's Building association, which was called for tomorrow afternoon, has been postponed indefinitely. The date will be announced in due time.

Drama Clubs Have Open Meeting.

In response to the plea of the Portland branch of the Drama League of America for the formation of clubs for the reading and discussion of the drama, two clubs have been formed on the east side with meetings held every week at the east side library. The evening class is held Monday at 8 o'clock, and the afternoon class club. Previous meetings looking toward the perfection of such an organization had been held and a constitution prepared, which was read yesterday. This constitution provides that "Any woman shall be eligible to the College club who shall have satisfactorily completed at least one year toward the bachelor's degree in any of the colleges and universities appearing in classes I and II of the classification prepared by the United States bureau of education, or the accepted list of institutions of the Carnegie foundation for the advancement of teaching, or who holds a degree or certificate of graduation from a professional school of law, medicine or pedagogy, which prescribes a course of at least three years. She must have been a resident of Portland for at least six months."

It was decided to have this constitution posted in the libraries of the city for one week. In the meantime, at the meeting of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae, to be held April 3, further plans for the College club will be discussed and at that meeting of college women to be held in two weeks, these reports will be heard and something definite will probably be accomplished. The consensus of opinion among the women seems to be the need of coordinating the existing clubs rather than the formation of an entirely new club; and it seems likely that that is what will be done. Mrs. Harry Beal Torrey presided yesterday, and the proposed constitution was read by Miss Harriet Wood, chairman of that committee.

Little Stories for Bedtime BY THORNTON W. BURGESS

What Happened When Farmer Brown's Boy Jumped Down.

There is a great big word which is sometimes used when things happen and cannot be explained any other way. It is called co-in-cid-ence. When two people start to do the same thing or to go to the same place, neither knowing anything about what the other was doing or planning to do, that is co-in-cid-ence. So it was co-in-cid-ence that was at the bottom of what happened to make Blacky the Crow laugh until he almost made himself sick.

Farmer Brown's Boy wasn't thinking of Buster Bear at all. It was so long since he had heard of or seen any sign of Buster that he had made up his mind that Buster had left the Green Forest and gone back to the Great Woods from which he had come. When Farmer Brown's boy stood on the great rock deep in the Green Forest making up his mind whether or not to jump down into that snowbank at the foot of Buster Bear was as far from his thoughts as the moon is from the earth.

Now, if Farmer Brown's Boy had gone there a day later nothing would have happened. It was just a co-in-cid-ence that he went when he did, which was at the very time when Buster had been waked from his long sleep by gentle Sister South Wind. You know, Buster had slept tight enough on a shelf under that great rock nicely shut in by that very snowbank Farmer Brown's Boy was looking down on. And now, the boy was awake. Buster was hungry, very hungry, for he had had nothing to eat since he went to sleep at the beginning of winter.

When he had stretched and stretched and kicked the kinks out of his legs he began to dig his way out through that snowbank. He had just got nicely started when something came plunging down through the snow almost on to him. It was Farmer Brown's Boy, who had jumped from the top of the great rock. Now, it would have been bad enough to have a thing like that happen under any circumstances, but Buster Bear was really only half awake, and of course this made it worse.

"Wow!" he bawled, and began to scramble madly to get out and away from this terrible thing that had come plunging down through the snow.

"Hi! Help!" yelled Farmer Brown's Boy as Buster bumped into him and knocked him down and rolled him over in the snow.

The other figure was Buster Bear, and he ran in the other direction.

Blacky the Crow, looking on from the top of a tree, saw a great disturbance in that bank of snow, then out of it burst two snow covered figures. One was Farmer Brown's Boy. He had lost his hat, but he didn't stop to look for it. With a wild yell he started to run, stumbled, fell, scrambled to his feet and ran, yelling "Help! help!"

The other figure was Buster Bear, and he ran in the other direction, whinnying and whimpering. His black coat was filled with snow and he was just as badly frightened as was Farmer Brown's Boy, and trying just as hard to get away. Do you wonder that Blacky laughed and laughed? The fact is it is doubtful if either Buster or Farmer Brown's Boy knew just what had happened. It had been so sudden that neither had time to think and each was doing his best to get away. They would do their thinking later. Each was sure that the other was after him, and each was trusting to his own good legs to get him to safety. It was very, very funny, but only Blacky the Crow saw the funny side then. Farmer Brown's Boy would later, but just then his only thought was to get out of the Green Forest.

And this is how Buster Bear finally came forth from his winter sleep, and why Blacky the Crow nearly laughed himself sick.

Women's Aid Gives Them Right to Vote

Sylvia Pankhurst Says That Inasmuch as Government Has Appealed for Help, Suffrage Should Follow, Now.

London, March 25.—In view of its appeal for an "industrial mobilization of women" the British government should grant votes to women at once, Sylvia Pankhurst, militant suffragette leader, declared today.

"Now that the government has grant women the franchise so that they might be better able to administer affairs," Miss Pankhurst said. "They are now more than ever concerned with the affairs of government. Women should be represented in all labor disputes and should be made eligible to election as heads of municipal governing bodies."

It is estimated that more than 25,000 women have already answered the government's appeal and have registered at labor exchanges throughout the country. In London alone 10,000 women have offered to take the places of men needed at the front, called for women's aid, it should
