CELLO OPENING IS HERALDED NATIONAL EVENT IN ARTICLE

Official Recognition Given by Congress Is Explained in Story Released Today.

IMPORTANCE IS DESCRIBED

A valuable contribution to the publicity attendant upon the plan of commemorating the completion of the Cello canal by a celebration from Lewiston to Astoria during the week of May 2-8 is provided by the National Rivers and Harbors congress in a news article released today which has been given national distribution.

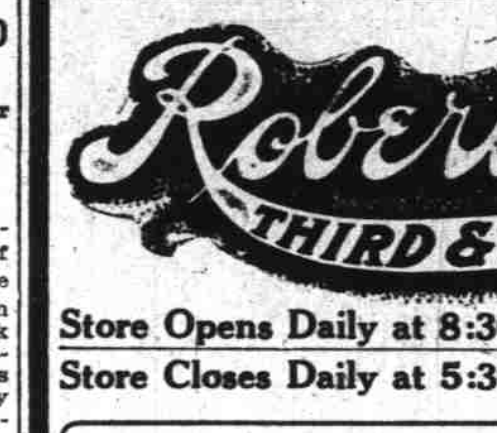

Official recognition has been given to the event by the congress of the United States, which passed a formal resolution in the closing hours of the Sixty-third congress, authorizing the appointment of a committee of three United States senators and nine members of congress to represent the United States government.

The watershed of the Columbia river and its tributaries embraces an area of approximately 250,000 square miles in the United States and an additional 50,000 in British Columbia, making a territory larger than the German empire and larger than the entire New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia combined. The soil, resources and climatic conditions of this territory are of such a nature as to stamp it among the world's greatest productive regions, which ultimately, when fully developed, will be able to support proportionately a larger population than any similar section of the globe.

Much more is said about the national transportation importance of the event, the fact that the Cello canal is second only to the Panama canal in the view of the Pacific northwest, and the stimulus which will be given water transportation by its opening and the extension of uninterrupted water navigation from the Pacific ocean 500 miles inland, so excellently produced that it is too bad to have chosen such a plot. A feature that holds a lot of heart interest is "His Brother's Keeper." The detail with which the picture has been made is notable and it has a vivid Civil War battle scene that is very attractive. It is a play of types that are all well sustained. For comedy there is a comic, "Mixed Values," that holds a lot of laughs, as well as the Keystone, "A One Night Stand," that is better than usual.
