

PORTLAND, OREGON, SATURDAY EVENING, APRIL 10, 1915.

Prince Henry of England Wants to Be a Soldier and Has Joined the Training Corps Turks Fear a Gasoline Famine in Their Country and Are Concealing the Liquid in Cans

OBSERVING POSITION OF THE ENEMY

Scouts of the German army take their field glasses and climb a tree to watch the movements of their foes. This picture was taken at an outpost near the town of Grudusk, Poland.

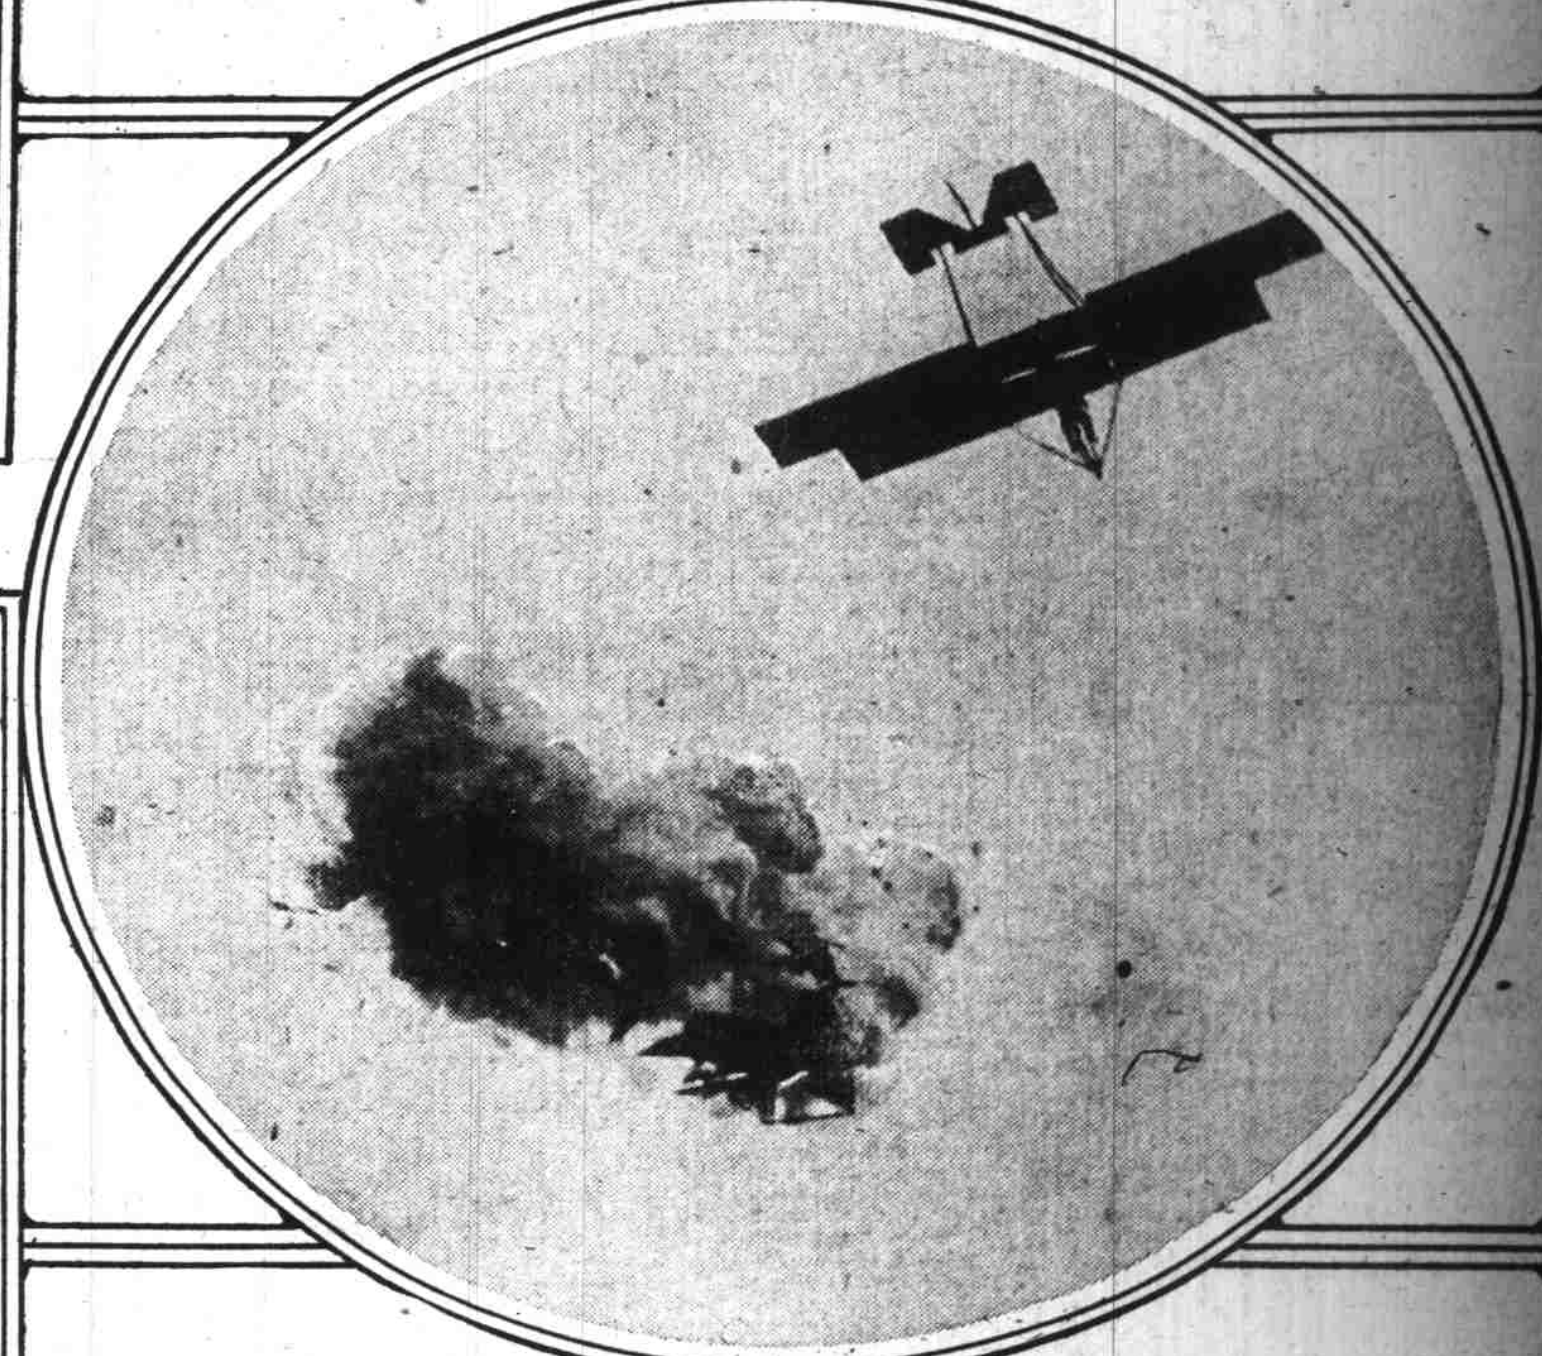

SERBIAN CROWN PRINCE

Crown Prince of Serbia, at left, talking to Austrian prisoners in Belgrade. Picture taken by Sir Thomas Lipton's Red Cross party.

ENGLISH PRINCE LEARNING TO BECOME SOLDIER

Prince Henry, the king's third son (second from left), has joined the ranks of the officers' training corps, and the picture shows him on a route march. Others are training at Eton.

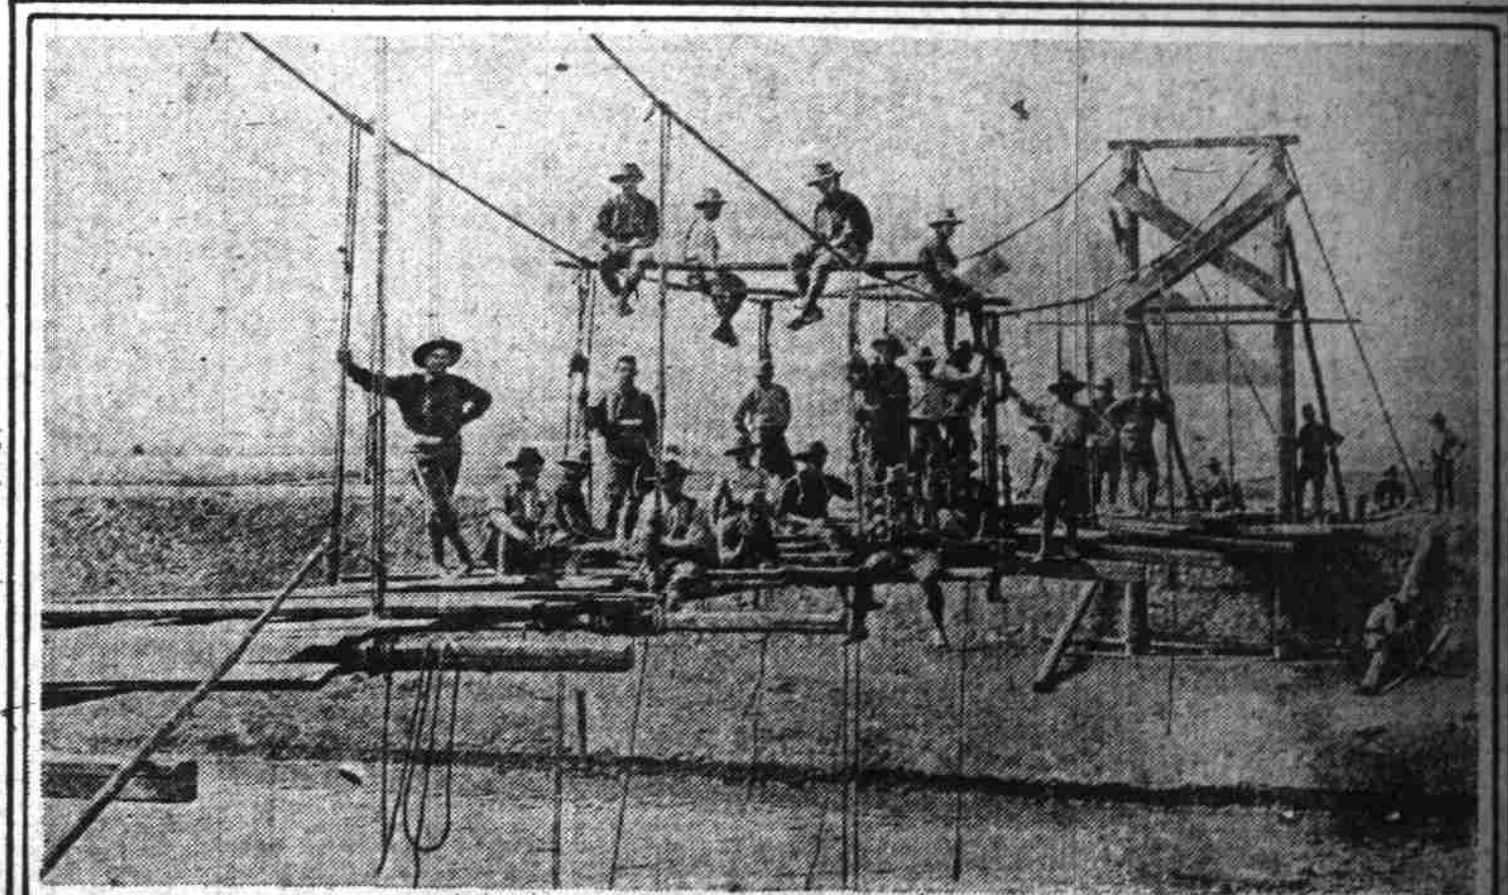

AVIATOR KILLED WHILE PERFORMING FOR "MOVIES"

A few seconds before Aviator Stites was dashed to death from his aeroplane (shown above) at Universal City, Calif., March 16, an aeroplane below it was blown up according to program.

TURKS IN CONSTANTINOPLE CARRYING GASOLINE TO SAFETY

The people of the Sultan's country appreciate the value of gasoline, and they are beginning to fear that there will soon be a shortage of it over there. To prevent this they are practicing economy in the use of the fluid, and in many instances hiding whole cans of it where reckless persons cannot readily find them.

SCENE WITH THE BRITISH FORCES IN EGYPT

A military bridge being built over the irrigation canal near the Australian camp at the pyramids. Two of them can be seen in the background. The men belong to the third field company of engineers.

—Photographs by International News Service.