Walla Walla Wheat Outlook Is Hopeful For All Plantings

Walla Walla, Wash., April 17.—
"Nothin' to do till tomorrow," well might be the slogan of the wheat farmer of the Walla Walla valley, for. his spring seeding done and coming up in record manner, summer fallowing completed, harvest. When "tomorrow" comes, it is a safe bet, however, that the soil tiller will have his hands more than full, and riding in an automobile will be completely forgotten, at least for he time being.

Occasional showers, with cool, damp nights and warm sunshine during the day all embined to give the fall and spring taining a good growth before the arrival of the "dry" season. In all parts of the county both spring and frowwn fields appear to better advantage To wheat men, with everything in favor of a perfect maturity.

Only the hot winds of June and July now are to be feared, say the farmers, and with the start it has secured, the grain should be well along before danger of these blighting blasts is imminent. Rain is not needed at this time, as a soaking rain fell early in the week and was general through in the week, and was general through this section of the state, it is said. In the foothill country the wheat plants have secured a considerable lead over those on the light land in the western section, but even in this latter belt it is claimed the fields never appeared to better advantage.

Chicago, April 17. — The most remarkable week for the Chicago wheat trade went to the finish with the greatest display of strength. Everything considered prices held in a remarkable manner with closing quotation for July at the high point. September wheat also closed at the top at $1.19\%. The trade here gave little attention to the fact that Liverpool prices were barely steady this morning. The English cables referred to decided activity among buyers on the continent. They also reported unprecedented demand for export at Argentine ports. Paris wheat was quoted 2\%c higher.

straw strewn floor When I reached Pilkallen after Ge sral Hindenburg's army had driven out ward the Augustowo forest, where 210. 000 men were either captured or anbroken. The houses were gaunt, silent wrecks, the sky showing through the shell holes as through the cycless sockets of a row of skulls. At the Town Hall, Captain Tzschirner, of General Hind-mburg's staff, who had been assigned to me as an escort, muttered some-thing in the chauffeur's ear and our mental looking building, which I soon learned was the town hall.

Around the door hung a group of dull eyed, pale faced women, who averted their eyes as we entered. Within were more women who moved about listlessly. Herr Braun, the landrat, or burgomaster, greeted me sadly. He led me into his office, where another woman was sitting, gazing stupidly out of the window. Pilkallen's chief executive explained:

"Each day these wretched women com here from the surrounding country an of Pilkailen, with 500 square miles, thousands of innocent women have been outraged by Russian officers and soldiers. Many have died from horror, Hundreds are ill, and our doctors are treating many who are diseased. mothers.

The German law against prevention of maternity is very severe. The doctors, therefore, cannot offer the vice could not help thinking of the fate of the brave East Prussian soldiers coming back to their wives and chill dren in a country so ravaged. This is one of Germany's most fearful problems, for which no states; that I met attempted even to suggest a solution. With strangely impassive face, as if the enormity of the thing benumbed him, Herr Braun told me that 200 to 200 women in Pilkallen district alone were assailed daily by the Russians during their three months stay, The district has an area of 500 square city. He spoke of orgies on one private estate occupied by the staff office of General Sievers and the unspeaks sufferings of the women imprisoned within the gray stone walls of the Hotel Skussun. "Many of the inmates of that fernal hole," he said, pointing toward the hotel, "told me their stories. have their affidavits. Some officer and many soldiers alike participa in these atrocities. Most of the diers were billeted around the town in private dwellings. They wandered out at will, breaking into houses, seizing the defenseless women, and con ting many kinds of crimes."
