

LANDING FIRST FISH MORE TO FARRELL THAN ANY BIG DEAL

Head of Steel Trust Whips Stream for Wily Trout the First Time in His Life.

WILL BUILD WAREHOUSE

Steel Corporation's Executive Discusses Future Plans of Company as Regards Portland.

Anyone can be president of the steel trust. Anybody can direct the channels of trade and hold under his thumb the strings that produce miracles of industry and finance.

But only a few can catch fish. James A. Farrell is one of those few. He demonstrated it yesterday on the Deschutes river, although he had never in his whole life before whipped a stream where lurk the mysterious trout.

Farrell is president of the United States Steel Corporation, reckoned the richest and most powerful of the great business of the world. But though he is a busy man, it did not take much coaxing to induce him to take a day off and join the happy party that sported yesterday on the Deschutes.

"It was wonderful," Mr. Farrell said this morning as he alighted from Oregon trunk train No. 9 at the North Bank station. "I never enjoyed such a day in my life. Now I can appreciate why men like me are always on a wet rock or wade through rapids."

"It was more exciting to land that first fish I caught than it was to put over the biggest deal in finance. It was worth while."

Everybody Caught Fish.

The party was arranged by T. D. Honeyman, of the Honeyman Hardware company, W. D. Skinner, traffic manager of the North Bank, and C. O. Sutherland, of the W. R. & N. Others who left Tuesday night for Central Oregon in a special train were Mrs. Farrell and Miss Katherine Farrell, Mrs. Skinner, Mrs. Honeyman, L. M. Korndorff, Pacific Coast traffic manager and A. T. DeForest, vice president of the corporation, yesterday morning and the party jacked the river adjacent. The merry-makers fished on up to Cove creek, where the cars had been switched in the meantime and last night the fishing was resumed at South Junction.

The outing was a treat to Mrs. Farrell as well as her husband, who accompanied by Mrs. Skinner, Mrs. Honeyman and Miss Farrell, she undertook to climb one of the mountains near the river and succeeded in reaching a lofty pinnacle overlooking the fishermen below. From that height she pulled a greeting which was answered by the steel magnate, just as would a girl and boy on a picnic.

Mr. Farrell was asked rather bluntly this morning if he really caught any fish himself or if he merely had acquired the classical habit of anglers in telling of exploits.

"If you want verification," he said with a grin, "ask Curt, there."

"Curt" Sutherland grinned wisely and admitted that the distinguished iron man had really and truly caught several.

But Mr. Farrell would not say how many he caught.

Steel Magnate's Memory Bad.

"You couldn't expect me to remember that," he said. "It was all so exciting that I lost count after the first one. The first, though, would have been enough. I never had such a day."

The only business Mr. Farrell did in Portland was to look at some sites for the big permanent warehouse the corporation is planning to build here.

"That's all we are planning to do at this time," he said. "We need the warehouses, though, because business demands buildings constructed for the steel business and buildings that are our own."

"Sometime it may be that we will save our own steel plants here, but not now."

He had been asked if the corporation ever intended to establish larger headquarters here, with mills supplied with raw materials from the vast iron mines of China. The importation of ore has long been considered by the Chamber of Commerce in connection with fullest development of the hydro-electric resources of Oregon.

If such a plan ever is worked out, Mr. Farrell said, it will come at some indefinite future period when conditions are better and the resources of the present mills become insufficient.

The Farrells will leave this afternoon for San Francisco on the Shasta limited. The exposition is the goal. After that the chief will get back to New York and resume the grind.

Removes Hairy Growth Without Pain or Bother

(Modes of Today)

It is not necessary to use a painful process to remove hairy growths, for with a little delicate hand you can keep the skin entirely free from these beauty destroyers. To remove hair, make a stiff paste with a little powder and water. Spread this on the hairy surface and in about two minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. To guard against disappointment, be careful to get real Delatone.—(Adv.)

Even the Salmon Take Advantage Of Celilo Canal

Pendleton, Or., May 13.—Will the Celilo canal result in a fishing industry for the upper Columbia? Residents of the west end of Umatilla county believe the canal is responsible for the great school of salmon which has found its way even into the Umatilla river and which, checked by the diversion dam of the West Umatilla project, fairly clogs the river just below the dam. Thousands of salmon have congregated there and many will die, it is believed, unless the fish ladder is adapted to this new sized fish. Residents of the west end are flocking to the dam with hook and line and so exciting has the sport become that a jitney service has been put into operation to carry the anglers back and forth.

Will Written on Laundry Cardboard

I. T. Heyen Could Find no Paper in Home on Which to Bequeath Estate of $12,000 to Friend.

San Francisco, Cal., May 13.—(U. P.)—Written on a piece of yellow cardboard from the bosom of a freshly laundered shirt the will of the late I. T. Heyen was introduced in Judge Graham's court today. Judge Graham held the document to be perfectly legal.

The opportune arrival of the family wagon saved Heyen from dying intestate. Shortly before his death on April 18 he searched his house for something on which to inscribe his will, but there was no paper to be found.

Just then the laundryman called. Swiftly seizing the cardboard from the shirt, Heyen scribbled on it with a blue pencil and bequeathed his estate of $12,000 to his friend, H. R. Robbins.

MOTHER IN STATE OF COLLAPSE AS RESULT OF DEATH OF SONS

Jack Mayes, Aviator, and Oscar Mayes Taken Away in Eighteen Months.

Stunned by two tragedies in her family circle within the past 18 months, Mrs. Jessie Mayes, mother of Jack Mayes, the Airman aviator with Villa's army, killed by a fall about two weeks ago, is in a state of collapse at her home in the Montgomery apartments.

Her two daughters, Mrs. Roy Smith of Missoula, Mont. and Miss Jennie Mayes of McMinnville are at her bedside, as her condition is considered most serious.

Jack Mayes' death followed the sudden death of another son Oscar Mayes, drowned in the Billesta river, but 18 months ago.

How young Mayes came to meet his death at Aguas Calientes while testing his airplane, was told recently by David Davidson, his companion in Villa's flying corps.

"Mayes was ill that Sunday," said Davidson, in discussing the accident, "and I do not think he would have been killed had he felt right. Aguas Calientes is about 7000 feet above sea level and we always experienced some engine trouble due to the altitude. Mayes was about 10 feet off the ground, when one of his wings struck the adobe house. The machine overturned and the engine crushed Mayes. When we pulled him from beneath the wrecked machine a few minutes after the accident he was dead."

General Villa, who by the way, treats all Americans with great courtesy, said that for political reasons it would be best to bury Mayes' body in Mexico. So we held the funeral services there.

ALL MALE ALIENS IN ENGLAND TO BE INTERNED IN CAMPS

sons of German and Austrian birth in London alone at 40,000 and there are upwards of 40,000 at liberty throughout the British Isles.

Rioting broke out anew today after the crowds had been dispersed during the night by a heavy rain and a public house owned by a German in Cannington was partially demolished.

At a great mass meeting on Tower Hill a resolution was adopted demanding that the government either intern or deport all enemy aliens at once. The meeting hastily assembled following the renewal of anti-German rioting.

Sidney Smith, presiding, warned the government that the public mind was so inflamed by the sinking of the Lusitania that further outrages might be expected unless quick action be taken.

Feeling throughout London and other cities was rapidly becoming more intense today. American meat dealers at the Smithfield market were forced to yield to pressure brought by British merchants and announced they would no longer serve German patrons.

The police dispersed a mob which gathered about German shops near the custom house during the day. A majority of those in the mob were women. Wild scenes were enacted when the police charged them, the women fighting back with sticks or other weapons that could be picked up.

On Walworth road a crowd of school children attacked two German shops. Persons with German or Austrian names whose homes or shops had not previously been wrecked spent last night barricaded in their houses. Strict orders were issued to the police to use drastic measures to prevent repetition of the wild scenes of yesterday, when more than 100 shops and houses owned by aliens were demolished and looted.

Most of the prominent leaders of the mobs which surged through the streets, wrecking and looting as they went, had been arrested today, but it was admitted there was still danger of serious outbreaks. Practically every German shop in East End is in ruins today.

Reports from provincial towns in the north declare rioting continues today. All aliens' shops have been closed and are closely guarded.

The "spy scare" which swept England at the opening of the war is again rampant. Anti-German agitators are declaring that should a Zeppelin raid be attempted on London or other cities, the citizens of German Rioting in South Africa.

Johannesburg, South Africa, May 13.—(U. P.)—Roused to the highest pitch of indignation by the sinking of the Lusitania and driven to action by reports of anti-German rioting in England, mobs here today wrecked or burned 10 large warehouses, three hotels, seven saloons, three moving picture theatres and many shops. All of the establishments attacked were owned by Germans.

Forming in front of the town hall, the mob brought out a large German flag and burned it. Several hundred men then forced entrance into the German club and wrecked it in less than five minutes. Police were powerless to control the rioters who spread over the town, driving all Germans from their business places or homes, and then demolishing the interior of applying the torch. Property worth $500,000 was destroyed.

Will Not Work With Germans.

Melbourne, May 13.—(U. P.)—Very serious anti-German riots were in progress here and elsewhere throughout Australia today. Workmen have daily refused to work with Germans, and a national strike is threatened.

Alleged Smuggler Uses Toy Dog

X. Nakama, Tokio Merchant, Accused of Adopting This Means of Bringing Pearls Into This Country Illegally.

San Francisco, May 13.—(P. N. S.)—Accused of smuggling pearls valued at $2500 into this port by means of clever schemes, Y. Nakama, pearl-merchant of Tokio, will be brought before United States Commissioner Krull today for examination on a charge of smuggling. Among the evidence against the Japanese are the remains of a little stuffed toy dog, in which customs inspectors found pearls to the value of $1000.

Faces Second Murder Charge.

Wenatchee, Wash., May 13.—(P. N. S.)—Already convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary for the murder of one, Harry Carr of Leavenworth, is today on trial in the superior court for the second time on a murder charge. Carr was convicted of the murder of J. C. Parsons, a juror empaneled in the case of the state against C. D. Franklin, and sentenced to prison. In the present trial he is charged with the murder of Franklin whom he killed in the court room at Cashmere while the trial of Franklin, on a statutory charge, was pending.
