

COMMERCE CHAMBER URGES EMPLOYERS TO LET GUARDSMEN OFF

Organization Joins With Patriotic Citizens to See That Men Go to Camp.

MATTER IMPORTANT ONE

Training of Whole Year Centers Upon Few Days in Field; Work Is No "Ramp."

Chamber of Commerce and patriotic citizens of Portland have joined hands for the purpose of inducing business men to grant leaves of absence or vacations to employees who are members of the Oregon national guard...

While it may seem extraordinary that any employer should refuse an employee to take part in the most important phase of national guard work...

Although there may be individual cases where such an attitude is justified on the part of an employer it is believed that in the majority of instances such an unpatriotic stand has been taken without due consideration of the function of the national guard...

Chamber Passes Resolution. To this end Adjutant General White has laid the proposition before the Portland Chamber of Commerce and the executive committee of that body has responded by passing a resolution calling upon employers to make it possible for their employees to take part in the summer training schools.

Whereas, it has been brought to the attention of the Portland Chamber of Commerce that some of the enlisted men in the Oregon national guard find themselves unable to attend the camps of instruction during the present season because of the attitude assumed by their employers...

Resolved, That the Chamber of Commerce express its confidence in the Oregon national guard and its approval of the purposes and methods of the camps of instruction...

Resolved, That employers are urged to make any reasonable or practicable concessions to such employees as are members of the Oregon national guard...

General White Writes. In presenting the facts to the Chamber of Commerce, Adjutant General White said...

It has been brought to the attention of this office that a considerable number of the enlisted men in the Oregon national guard find themselves unable to attend the camps of instruction during the present season because of the attitude assumed by their employers...

In many instances employers are refusing arbitrarily to allow their men who are members of the Oregon national guard to leave their work for the summer of 1915...

The list of such employers is as follows: Some of the most prominent firms of the community are among the instances, headed by men who are prominent in the work of the Portland Chamber of Commerce...

It is not believed that this attitude on the part of employers indicates antagonism to military service; the effect is quite as disastrous to the welfare of the Oregon national guard...

The enlisted men of the state service give very freely their time and energies in preparing themselves for military service...

but what makes a conscript man a man is not in the performance of his duty, but in the attitude of mind which he brings to the performance of that duty...

Employers Should Help. It is felt that the national employer of men who serve in the national guard should assume a proper and encouraging attitude...

Instruction Camp No Outing. It is a mistake for the public to think that the guardsmen go to camp for an outing...

At Gearhart was put in practice those things we have learned at the Army during the year. The whole training of 12 months is concentrated on the training camp when the guardsmen get a taste of soldiering as it really is.

At Gearhart may be a seaside resort, but it is chosen precisely because the sea air and breezes enable a man to stand up under the gruelling program mapped out for him...

Company Commander who is most desirous to have every man answer roll call at the encampment.

"I deprecate any disposition on the part of employers to refuse to allow their men to take part in the summer camp of the national guard," said Brigadier General Thomas M. Anderson, U. S. A., retired.

"From my own experience I know full well that the trained man is what counts in warfare. The reason of patriotism, if for none other, employers should make every possible allowance for the attendance of their employees at the camp."

Mother Becomes Confused; Forgets Child in Streetcar

Wringing her hands and weeping copiously a woman approached the streetcar inspector at Broadway and Larrabee street, yesterday afternoon.

"I've lost my boy and I can't remember whether I left him on the car or at Peninsula Park," she sobbed. "Please find him for me."

Meantime the little boy was riding cityward on a Mississippi avenue car. When the car turned back on its outward trip the crew discovered the lone child and took him to the police station.

The mother explained that she hurried to leave the Mississippi avenue car to transfer to the bridge car, thinking the boy was following her. She discovered her loss soon after boarding the transfer car and at once hurried back to find the car she had left first.

GREATEST FEAT OF BIG WAR CREDITED TO THIS COUNTRY

Prominent Englishman Says Belgian Relief Work Magnificently Conducted.

JOB IS IMMENSE ONE

Feeding 10,000,000 People Done By Persons Without Previous Experience, Without Hope of Reward.

Harry E. Brittain, one of the founders of the Society of Pilgrims, and chairman of the London branch of the society, and a member of the Belgian finance commission, says that the United States has accomplished the greatest feat of the European war.

This feat, he says, has been made possible by America's neutrality and the manner in which the American commission has handled the relief work for the starving Belgians and French.

Mr. Brittain is a Portland visitor. He is a guest at the Arlington club. He has visited America some 30 or 35 times, but this is the first time he has come to the Pacific coast states and he is delighted with California and Oregon.

WORLD LIKE TO GO TO FRONT

Like all loyal Englishmen, of his class, he would like to be at the front in the trenches. He sort of apologizes for not being there by explaining that as a result of college sports he had an injury to his leg which disqualified him.

"But some of us have to stay behind anyway," he said. "The administrative and executive work."

Since the beginning of the war, Mr. Brittain has been a member of the Belgian finance committee and chairman of the Overseas Committee of London. He was the one Englishman asked to serve as a member of the American Citizens' Emergency committee at the beginning of the war.

He says he has come over to this country partly in behalf of the Royal Colonial Institute of London, of whose council he is a member, and partly in touch with members of the institute in this country and to confer with members of the American branch of the Pilgrims.

Will Not Discuss War. "I am not here to start or take part in any propaganda," he said. "The British are not making any propaganda. I have no intention of being drawn into any discussion of the war, which might lead to a suggestion of controversy."

AMERICAN'S AGONY APPRECIATED

"The United States, therefore, is not only perfectly able but has a very natural prejudice in favor of forming its own opinion concerning the European situation, as well as upon other matters, and for that reason it can very well do without advice from visitors from other lands."

"I can speak, however, most emphatically on behalf of my fellow countrymen when I say how sincerely we have appreciated the magnificent way in which America, without the need of an appeal, has come forward to help in every way the sick and suffering in Europe. As individuals, we have put us under a debt of gratitude we can never repay. In ways too numerous to detail we are your debtors, but who has more than all else touched our hearts is your magnificent philanthropy in feeding the Belgian people. It has fallen to my lot to see a great deal of the working of the American Commission for Relief, and the remarkable efficiency of what has been done has filled me with admiration."

Fed 10,000,000 People. "Consider for a moment what this commission has done. A handful of Americans, with no previous experience in this kind of work, is feeding 10,000,000 people—7,000,000 Belgians and 3,000,000 French. In other words, with no hope of reward save the inarticulate thanks of a nation half throttled and daily in danger of starvation, your countrymen in England and Belgium, backed of course, by yourselves, have tackled a job bigger than that which confronts the commissariat of any army in Europe. And it is the privilege of every Britisher to tell you you have stepped in where war prevented us from going.

if for no other reason, for this alone the neutrality of the United States should be welcomed by every one of my fellow countrymen. Through your neutrality you have been able to accomplish the greatest feat of the war. Mr. Hoover's commission has become the one power—the really one neutral power, respected by all nations. It was organized by Americans, it is run by Americans, and if anyone ever says that the neutrality of the United States is the greatest of all wars was merely passive circumspection, history will hold him up as a liar and flogging in his face an achievement that General Grant or General Lee would have admitted to be more to their credit than any of the many victories they gained by strategy."

English Are Grateful. "Do not think because we say little that we are not grateful. We know at home in England that to the American Commission for Relief in Belgium we owe the safety and the lives of the bulk of the Belgian nation. Our government takes the personal word of honor of your fellow countryman, Mr. Hoover, as an international assurance in a way which has no precedent and no parallel in the history of peace or war. On the pledge of one American, we have allowed to go into Belgium millions of dollars worth of food which would be of priceless military and other value to the Germans who occupy the country. Mr. Hoover, in the name of the American Commission for Relief in Belgium, tells us this will only go to the Belgians. We take his word and have no reason to regret it."

But our military and naval authorities would never be justified in taking the word, under the circumstances of a life and death struggle, of one American, or even of the

INCENDIARY FIRES ARE DECREASING

Report of Fire Marshal Stevens to Mayor Albee Reveals Splendid Record for Month of June.

The two men recently convicted of arson were the first cases in Oregon where convictions were secured solely on circumstantial evidence, according to a report made to Mayor Albee by Fire Marshal Stevens for the month of June.

Owing to the work of the fire marshal and his assistants the number of fire alarms has decreased and the number of incendiary fires has been cut to a minimum.

In June there were less fire alarms than in any month since March, 1913, the total number being 62 as compared with 139 alarms for June, 1914. There was not a single false alarm turned in and it is the first month since March, 1902, that no false alarms have been received. A record for three years ago, when 316 false alarms were established, there being a period of 104% hours during which no alarms were received.
