O. A. C. CAR TO DEMONSTRATE CANNING

Four steps in the cold pack method of canning peas. Top, left to right—First step, blanching or par-boiling; second step, plunging peas in cold water. Bottom, left to right, third step—Cold packing product in glass jars and tin cans; fourth step, ready to sterilize.

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, July 10.—A special car for demonstrating canning by the steam pressure and cold pack methods will be operated over the lines of the Southern Pacific in Oregon beginning Monday, July 12. This is so far as known, the first car of the kind to be operated in the United States. The purpose of the demonstration is to teach the system by some practical means that will enable those that are interested to do home canning both for home consumption and for commercial purposes. Demonstration from this car will be carried on at various points during a period of two weeks, according to arrangements that have just been made by R. D. Hietzel, director of college extension, and H. M. Hinchaw, general freight agent of the Southern Pacific Railway company. The car will be in charge of Professor F. L. Griffin.

The first instruction in canning by the steam pressure and cold pack methods is that it requires more time and labor and necessitates standing over a hot stove. Another is that even if the product, the jars, rubbers and the covers are perfectly sterilized there is still a possibility of bacteria getting in while the cooked fruit is being dipped from the kettle to the jar.

Two Essentials in Canning. Two things only are necessary for the successful canning of fruits, vegetables and meats in the home: First, the product must be completely sterilized; second, the product must be packed in air tight containers.

There are two methods usually employed in the home and in commercial canneries for preserving food-stuffs. One is called the hot pack method, the other the cold pack method. In the hot pack method, the food product is first sterilized or cooked and then placed or packed in the jars. One objection to the hot pack method is that it requires more time and labor and necessitates standing over a hot stove. Another is that even if the product, the jars, rubbers and the covers are perfectly sterilized there is still a possibility of bacteria getting in while the cooked fruit is being dipped from the kettle to the jar.

DR. HILLIS TELLS AT CORVALLIS OF GREAT NATION OF FUTURE

Handles Subject "America of Today and Tomorrow" in Pleasing Manner.

THE ATTENDANCE IS GOOD

Morning Sessions at Chautauque Devoted to Games and Stories for Children. Corvallis, Or., July 10.—Corvallis Chautauque week got under way with splendid impetus by the address of Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, the eminent Brooklyn divine.

In his address on "America of Today and Tomorrow," Dr. Hillis handled his subject and succeeded without a flaw, except the little slip in his faultless diction when he tried to say "Williamette." He really turned this trifling against his advantage by saying that pronouncing Williamette is like a journey across the Sahara—"either you arrive or you don't arrive."

Figures Are Staggering. The development of resources within the borders of this nation was shown by statistics that are equally thrilling. From the days of the fathers until now man's labor power has been multiplied by 62, so that by aid of power machinery the average working man does the labor of 62 men. The development of harvesting from the sickle to the giant combine of eastern Oregon was made to serve as an illustration of this principle.
