IN THE GARDEN The gardener coming brilliant with the many varieties of gladioli, so striking and so easily grown that every garden should abound with them. There are early bloomers, late bloomers, dwarfs and the tall growers to be had in almost any color or combination of colors. As soon as the tall growers are planted there is nothing to prevent one with ground enough having them from July to frost. The tall growers are sown in rows for planting among shrubbery and the dwarfs are best arranged near the outer edge of a shrubbery border or under a pergola. The seeds are usually kept over winter in the ordinary cellar and can be propagated from seed and bulbs. The seeds can be sown in the fall or in the spring. The bulbs should be collected when the pods begin to crack open. Lay them away until next spring, then sow the seeds in good garden soil.

PREPARING SOIL To prepare the soil you will have to exercise some care thoroughly several times, breaking up every clod. When you are sure the soil is separated into fine pieces incorporate with it some of the best fertilizer, manure and a generous supply of sand. See that this is all well mixed together. Sow the seeds in drills six inches apart, but do not allow the ground to become hard. In this way they can be grown until fall, when they will have developed into bulbets, irregular in size, about the size of peas, others much larger.

These must be all lifted, but handled just as little as possible. When you are sure you have all the good ones they must be placed in some dry part of the cellar. A dark spot is preferable. The following spring they will be in good condition to plant in pots, and exactly as you would young onion sets, and by the second fall you will be the possessor of fine, healthy growing bulbs that will flower beautifully the following season.

BULBETS CERTAIN A label stating just why they have been kept. Following the method of the above, secure some varieties very much finer than anything you have had before. Keep these and discard the poorer ones. When grown from seed, there is an uncertainty as to what you will have, but not so when grown from bulbs. These always bloom the same in color, size and habit as the parent bulb.

When you dig the bulbs in the fall do so carefully, for around each large bulb you will find from one to a dozen or so small ones, which should be carefully saved and labeled, so you will know just what you have. Plant them very carefully, and just as you do with the bulbs grown from seed.

HANDY SCRAPER Mrs. W. E. Portland has invented a scraper that will come in handy in no end of places. It is simple, durable, strong and lasts, not rust. It is fashioned of thin metal in a heart shape, except that the top is straight. It is built on the arc of four different circles, and has rounded corners which will fit in the corners of all sorts of kettles and pans. The point comes in for various uses and the straight edge makes a good surface for scraping. There is a hole near the top to hang the scraper up by and if kept near the sink it will prove a friend in need to the housewife.

DECREES OF FASHION. A large and long black bow attached to the back of a high plaiting is one of the latest in the hair. Dainty, airy hats of halcyon come in pink, white, blue, tan and gold. The shapes are flat and picturesque. Petticoats are made of pretty, flowered material, or of plain white, with ruffles of flowered material. Costly embroideries seem to be entirely out of the question on summer frocks. Tiny trills of lace and net alternate.

"I think," replied the all wise one, "Uncle Ben, I'm afraid."

From the region of the hall where the lights had just disappeared, a voice came from the hall. "I'm afraid," he said, "because of the excessive heat, Twinkle's voice trembled as she called to the one who never failed to come to her help. "Afraid of what?" asked Uncle Ben. "Afraid of the dark," was the reply. "But there is nothing there to be afraid of," was Uncle Ben's soothing assurance. "If I lighted the gas, and had everything would be just exactly like it is in the daytime."

"I know, but I'm afraid anyway," whimpured Twinkle. The answer showed she was very near tears.

Uncle Ben rose from the comfortable chair where he was smoking his evening cigar and disappeared into the hall, which looked like a big cave in the darkness. In a minute he returned, leading Twinkle by the hand. Her brown eyes were very wide, and she kept looking behind her as she walked.

"Why were you afraid?" he asked her, when she was safe on his knee. "I was thinking that if I were a great big ghostly beast, would jump out at me," Twinkle explained. "And I felt like there was something behind me, going to thump at my feet, an' great lookin' at me, O-uh, it made me thiver all over."

"Poor little Twinkle," laughed Uncle Ben. "I used to be scared in the dark, but I'm not any more," bragged Suffy. "It's silly. Only babies get scared of nothing."

"I guess if you thaw a big black bear you'd get thared," asserted Twinkle.

"Maybe if I saw one really and didn't have a gun, I might," Suffy admitted. "But not if I only thought I saw one."

"Uncle Ben," said Sister Bell, who had been dreaming on the veranda steps, "what makes us afraid in the dark?"

WIDOW OF BECKER'S VICTIMS ANXIOUS FOR NEWS OF EXECUTION

Mrs. Rosenthal Says That Has Been Her Only Consolation for Three Years.

NOW OBJECT OF CHARITY

For Best Friend, She Says, is Dandy, White Poole—Tells of Husband Meeting Kiltanin.

By Ada Patterson.

New York, July 24.—A dark, melancholy figure crouching in a shadowy corner, waiting for a blow to fall upon her enemy, is Mrs. Lillian Rosenthal, the woman who, two juries have agreed, Becker made a widow. She is living with every thought fixed upon the hour of his execution.

After Becker's second trial, Mrs. Rosenthal, it is told, let her let us say, through good fortune. She is living with friends, and, frankly, upon their bounty.

"I am waiting for the only news that can interest me any more," Mrs. Rosenthal says. "I am waiting for the news that my husband is dead. I am waiting for the news that my husband is dead."

Miss Dorothy Nudelman, whose engagement to Isadore Garber, of Spokane, is announced by Miss Nudelman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Nudelman. The couple will receive tomorrow evening, from 7:30 to 10:00 o'clock.

BETROTHED COUPLE WILL RECEIVE TOMORROW

Miss Dorothy Nudelman, whose engagement to Isadore Garber, of Spokane, is announced by Miss Nudelman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Nudelman. The couple will receive tomorrow evening, from 7:30 to 10:00 o'clock.

New York Pastor Speaks Tomorrow

Another of the fine services of worship at the First Universalist church, Broadway and East Twenty-third streets, will be held Sunday morning at 10:45 o'clock. Dr. Corby, the pastor, will be assisted by the Rev. Dr. G. E. Huntley of St. Lawrence University, New York. Dr. Huntley is not only a Sunday school expert, but an inspiring preacher, and student who wins hosts of friends.

Several other ministers who are visiting in the city have been secured, among them Rev. Hazel Kirk of New York, and Rev. H. H. Herman of Illinois. Those who desire a good seat are advised to come early. In the Sunday school there will be special features, as well as an address to the women during the Sunday school hour by Mrs. Lilla F. Huntley, vice president of the National Women's Missionary society.

PERSONAL MENTION

Operation May Be Avoided. If Richard Olcott, one of the twins recently born to Secretary of State and Ben Olcott, had held his own or improves during the next couple of days no operation will be necessary, according to Dr. J. B. Bolder, who is attending the tiny patient. Secretary Olcott brought his son to Portland Thursday for treatment for an obstruction in the passage between the stomach and the small intestine. He is at the home of ex-Governor West, brother-in-law of the secretary of state.

LABOR COUNCIL WILL PICK MEMBERS FOR CONSTITUTION BOARD

Selection Will Be Made by the Central Body Next Friday Night.

MUCH DISCUSSION IS HELD

J. E. Siegler's Letter Regarding Handling of Land Grant Problem Referred to a Committee.

The Central Labor council met last night in the Labor Temple with a large attendance. It was decided to elect the five members of the constitution board next Friday night. This board will consist of five members from organized labor and five from the employers of labor selected by the Chamber of Commerce to consider all industrial disputes as they are brought before it.

After considerable discussion it was voted to confine the members thereof to the Central Labor council to delegates only. The further restriction was placed that only men working at their trade could be elected.

While speaking on both sides of the question were made by a score or more there was no apparent antagonism evidenced as to restricting the members of the constitution board to delegates to the Central Labor council.

"We don't want any politicians slipping in on that board," said one of the speakers. "We have not got all the brains in the labor movement," said Hibbs of the carpenters. "Some of our real brainy men are sent to the district and rates are sent here."

T. H. Burchard, president of the State Federation of Labor and a delegate from the Musicians' union, thought that only active men familiar with affairs outside their own unions should be on the board.

Dr. E. J. Stewart, physical director of the Oregon Agricultural college, is at the Oregon. Miss Frances Storsdahl of Honolulu is at the Seward. Dr. D. B. Holden, Mrs. F. C. Holden, J. S. McCormick of the Portland, compose a Victoria party at the Portland. John Wiley, publisher of "The Hotel Monthly," is a Portland visitor. With his son, John Knight Wiley, he is at the Imperial.

Conditions Are Good. The delegates of the carpenters and painters who met last night at the hotel here to discuss the conditions are good in their trades now, but few men on the rolls being out of work, although there are some at work in the harvest and along other lines during the summer.

On recommendation of the executive committee of the carpenters and painters a shipbuilding firm was put upon the unfair list because all efforts to secure a hearing with members of the firm had failed after several efforts.

Letters Are Referred. A letter was read from a Boston, Mass. union, saying that an employer with whom they were in dispute had levied an assessment of 10 cents each on all of his several hundred employees with which to meet his present needs. Two long letters from Dr. J. E. Ziegler, relative to some proposed legislation regarding the labor movement, were referred to the legislative committee, and the consideration of the editor of the Labor Press.

The Jinty Drivers' union was excluded from its per capita tax for July. The delegates reported that they had over 250 members, but expected to have some thirty less.

A letter was read from a Boston, Mass. union, saying that an employer with whom they were in dispute had levied an assessment of 10 cents each on all of his several hundred employees with which to meet his present needs.

Will Confirm Class Of Boys and Girls

The closing sermon in the series will be delivered August 1, when the discussion will be on the "Mind of the Future." For trial free, write to Dept. No. R. Resinol, Baltimore, Md. Excellent for sunburn. (Ad.)

Pendleton's New "Nat" Is Opened

Commercial Club Committee Which Has Been in Charge of the Work Turns Institution Over to the City.

Pendleton, Or., July 24.—Pendleton's new public natatorium, built at a cost of $10,000, was formally dedicated last night and presented to the city by the Commercial club committee which has had charge of the work since the first agitation for a swimming pool one year ago. Half the citizenship turned out to witness the exercises which opened the institution.

On behalf of the Commercial club, District Attorney Frederick Bishwer made the presentation, speaker and Acting Mayor John Dyer responded. A financial statement was made by the committee showing that 700 citizens had contributed to the fund and contributions ranging from 50 cents to $100.

Swimming and diving contests were held for men, boys and girls and an exhibition of fancy swimming and diving was given by Jimmie Fulton of the team. Thereafter, the pool was turned over to the public and hundreds plunged into the swim.

Mayor of Dallas Is Ill Again

Dallas, Or., July 24.—Everett Nelson, aged 17, was badly injured by being kicked by a horse a few days ago. One hand and a leg were hurt.

Rev. C. C. Curtis delivered his last sermon as pastor of the Christian church here last Sunday. On Monday he and Mrs. Curtis, who is also an active worker in the church, left for Corvallis, where they will have charge of the Christian church.

The Women's club of Dallas has voted to devote its energies to the coming year to the improvement of City park. A landscape gardener will be employed and flower beds and lawns laid out.

Dallas will have a community sing on August 7, in connection with the regular weekly band concert on the courthouse plaza.

A new driver of latest model was this week installed in the local plant of the J. K. Army Packing company. Mayor E. C. Kirkpatrick, who was seriously ill in Portland a few weeks ago, has suffered a relapse and is again confined to his bed. While his condition is not considered immediately critical, he is said to have an absolute quiet and rest for at least 10 days.

HOOD RIVER IS A SURPRISE
Was Generally Understood That V. C. Brock Would Be Appointed.

Hood River, Or., July 24.—T. A. Reavis of Hood River received word yesterday by wire from a Washington, D. C. bonding house that he had been appointed postmaster at Hood River to succeed J. P. Lucas, Taft appointee.

The appointment of Mr. Reavis comes as a great surprise to the Democratic politicians of Hood River county. It was expected that V. C. Brock, assistant cashier of the First National bank, would receive the appointment, as he had the solid support of the business interests of the city.

Mr. Reavis is a native of Missouri, is a farmer, and has resided in Hood River for the past 12 years, coming to Hood River from Wallawa county.

Mr. Reavis said yesterday that he had the assurance of the appointment several months ago, and that the announcement was no surprise to him.

Lincoln Warehouses Destroyed by Fire

Dallas, Or., July 24.—Two large warehouses at Lincoln, Polk county, were destroyed by fire at an early hour Thursday morning. Although the buildings had a capacity of 3,000 bushels, there was no grain in them at the time of the fire. Two weeks ago the only store at Lincoln was burned, and both fires are believed to be incendiary origin.

Viscount Triverton at War.

New York, July 24.—(L. N. B.)—Viscount Triverton, son of the Earl of Halsbury, has joined the aerial fighting corps attached to the British navy and has left for the front, according to a letter received today from Italy.

Triverton by her mother, Lady Duff Gordon, who is spending the summer in this country. Eight years ago Lord Triverton married the Hon. Wallace, daughter of Lady Duff Gordon. They have two children.
