

LEADING OSTEOPATHS WILL EXPLAIN AIMS OF THE PROFESSION

Evening of Entertainment Is Provided on Occasion of Opening of Convention.

MANY SUBJECTS LISTED

Public Invited to Attend Meeting to Be Held in the Baker Theatre Monday Evening.

The convention of the American Osteopathic association which opens at the Multnomah hotel tomorrow morning, has provided for the benefit of the lay public, an evening of instruction and entertainment at the Baker theatre Monday night at 8 o'clock. The public is invited, and it will give many people interested in osteopathy an opportunity of hearing about the progress of this new school of practice.

Dr. R. Kendrick Smith, of Boston, president of the Boston Browning society, which is one of the oldest literary societies in existence, will give a popular health lecture, and as he is a speaker of much distinction, he will be a drawing card.

Dr. A. G. Hildreth, of Macon, Ga., the president and director of the Still-Hildreth Sanitarium, a million dollar institution which is having much success in the treatment of the insane, will talk on the institutional care of nervous diseases, and tell of results in the treatment of insanity by osteopathy.

Care of the Insane. This institution, which has only been in existence a couple of years, has offered the first opportunity to show what can be accomplished in the care of the insane by means of special adjustment. Dr. Hildreth is past president of the National association, having been twice elected to that office, and is one of the great leaders of the profession.

Dr. T. J. Ruddy, of Los Angeles, is one of the notable men among the osteopathic specialists of the Pacific Coast. He will give a stereoscopic lecture on the subject of "Revolutionary Methods in Osteopathy."

Dr. Ruddy is famous for much success in the treatment of partial deafness by the new method which has been developed by osteopathic specialists, viz., the use of the finger in freeing obstruction and diseased conditions in the region of the eustachian tube and adjustment of the bones of the neck. Dr. Ruddy has made an exhaustive study of this method of treatment, and has demonstrated by good results that a new hope can be extended to many of the cases of partial deafness which are supposed to have reached the point of incurability.

While some of the results Dr. Ruddy accomplishes in this work seem to be almost sensational, he is a most careful and conscientious practitioner, and feels that the results he obtains by osteopathic methods in eye, ear, nose and throat work, exceeds anything he could hope for under the old school methods.

Film Pictures Feature. Dr. J. Ivan Dufur, of Philadelphia, with his "Movie Pictures of Nervous Diseases," will doubtless be the center of interest for the evening, as this is the first time in the history of any school of practice that moving pictures have been used for demonstration and study in diagnosis. Dr. Dufur is a teacher at the Philadelphia college of Osteopathy, and has worked out a plan that will probably revolutionize the teaching of nervous diseases in our colleges. No less a periodical than the Scientific American reviewed Dr. Dufur's work with moving pictures in a recent issue of that publication.

While the osteopaths are busy with their convention matters, the public meeting on Monday night at the Baker theatre will prove instructive and interesting to all who wish to attend.

ESTABLISHED CREDIT AS IMPORTANT AS A BANK ACCOUNT

"What's the use of trying?" murmured Tom Thrift, more to himself than to his friend John, who sat next to him. "For hours I have tramped from one business office to another in search of a position, and the result is nothing. Can't get any. All the men I have interviewed seemed to have treated me in similar manner; each in turn, looked up at me, listened to my plea very patiently, but more or less hastily said, 'No.' 'I'll tell you, Tom,' said John, 'what keeps you from getting a position? It's not your personal shabby appearance, while it is not exactly repulsive, yet it is not magnetic enough to invite confidence of trust.' 'True,' admitted Tom, 'but how could I dress up respectably and attractively when I am completely broke?' His friend John thought a while, and said, 'I have no cash either, but will see that you are fitted to a stylish, attention-commanding suit of clothes. Hat, shirt, shoes, etc., and your luck will change as by a magic word. I can easily do it, because my credit is established. I can get anything on time, and on my recommendation you will open an account, too, and pay later on, a little each week. You'll never miss the little amounts, and will always be dressed as a gentleman.'" particular interest to owners, managers, buyers, heads of departments or the man who is struggling to establish a small business in the outlying districts. He tells of the tendency to concentration, the extent to which it has gone and its necessary limitations. Mr. Parlin speaks of the department store and its problems as an example of concentrated merchandising and goes into the forces underlying the department store itself. From the big institution he jumps to the corner grocery as an example of community retailing and contrasts its problems with those of the department concern.

Of course they went to the Eastern, 405 Washington street, and Tom's troubles were over. He now holds a responsible position with a local house, and makes good.—Adv.

As the head of the Department of Commercial Research maintained by the Curtis Publishing company, Mr. Parlin has conducted many exhaustive researches into various industries of the United States, and is considered to be one of the best equipped men who has ever spoken to the business men of Portland.

DEER ARE PLENTIFUL BECAUSE OF SPIRIT OF UPHOLDING LAWS

Game Reserves Said to Offer Fine Sport for Hunters of Present Season.

Because of the greater spirit of protection shown by the hunters' clubs and the sportsmen individually, there are more deer this year than there have been for many seasons, is the report of Carl D. Shoemaker, state game warden, who returned yesterday from a 16-day tour through the state.

The warden visited the game reserves and the many hunters' clubs in order to familiarize himself with local conditions and get acquainted. All the accounts say the mountains abound with deer. Last winter the light-footed animals were little molested by the wild cats and cougars, as there was plenty of food to be had.

The main reason for the increase, however, is the preventive measure taken by the organization of sportsmen. Heretofore some of the members were the worst violators. They would shoot female deer and then mutilate the carcass so that it could not be recognized by the game wardens. Since the cooperative work has been instituted between the law enforcers and the hunters most of the illegal hunting has stopped.

In game district No. 1, which includes all the counties west of the Cascade range, the open season for China pheasants will be from October 1 to 31, with the exception of Jackson county, where only 10 days' hunting will be allowed, beginning on October 1. There will be no open season in Cook, Curry and Josephine counties. In the eastern Oregon district, with the exception of Union county, there will be no China pheasant shooting this year. The season in Union will last from October 1 to 10.

Deer are plentiful this year, and will provide sport for thousands this year. Geese are being given pretty good care on the reserve in Harney county, so they will increase in numbers.

Manufacturers Seek Ordnance Experts

Washington, July 31.—(I. N. S.)—The output of the private manufacturers of munitions of war is so far from meeting the demands of the European belligerents that extraordinary efforts are being made to obtain ordnance experts from the United States army.

Major A. J. Hawkins and Captain W. M. Wilhelm of the ordnance department have tendered their resignations to Secretary Garrison. Both have been offered positions with private manufacturers of munitions. Lieutenant Colonel Tracey C. Dickson, another ordnance expert, has asked to be retired in order that he may accept private employment.

Private firms are willing to pay huge salaries to such army officers as have ordnance experience, as an inducement to quit the service and take charge of their plants. Secretary Garrison believes that the encouragement of private manufacturers is a necessary detail in the plan of a more adequate national defense.

Bridal Veil Company's Claim to Water in Young's Creek Sheppard's Dell, Is Issue.

COMMUNICATION ADVISES ACTION

Communication Has Been Filed With City Auditor With Request for an Investigation.

The Bridal Veil Lumber company is using a large portion of Young's creek at Sheppard's Dell through a flume to Bridal Veil and claims the right to do so under some kind of an alleged appropriation made a few years ago, according to a communication from E. E. Covert filed with the city auditor's office yesterday and to be presented to the council Wednesday.

Mr. Covert urges that the park department and city attorney take up the matter at once with a view to the city's asserting its rights in the premises, as he states that if the matter is delayed long the company's rights will become absolute by prescription.

One of the moving causes of Mr. Sheppard's gift of the Dell property to the city, Mr. Covert points out, was to the effect that the view of the flow of water at Sheppard's Dell from any unlawful interference and while owner there he never consented to the use of this water by the Bridal Veil Lumber company.

It was approved by the city engineer.

The proposal was $1504 over the engineer's estimate of $119,602. Commissioner Dieck stated that failure to award the contract would put the proceedings back 30 days and prevent the work's being done this year.

An ordinance providing for revoking the saloon license at 1 North Third street now held in the name of George Wood, and Wood's application, and providing for a refund of the unexpired portion of the license fee, will be prepared by the city auditor at the request of the mayor for submission to the council Wednesday. The saloon, the Spokane, has been given over to Ned McDonald by Wood, but no transfer of Wood's license is legal.

$150 Is Set Aside.

The council appropriated $150 to the unemployed fund yesterday to provide for paying that amount to M. J. The additional payment was made as a result of a dispute over the measurement of the cut wood by the city's men and men employed by Kelly.

HELP WANTED

DURING AUGUST
PORTLAND HAS BEEN GOOD TO ME—I WANT TO DO SOMETHING FOR PORTLAND

By RAY BARKHURST

During the past year I am proud to state that business has been exceedingly good with me. I have done more business than at any time in the history of my tailoring business and I am truly and gratefully thankful to my fellow citizens. To show my appreciation I would like to in return do something for good old Portland, and I have decided on this plan.

Portland needs work for its unemployed tailors, especially at this season of the year, when work is slack, and I will do my share by providing plenty of work if the men of Portland will only help out a little.

Many men who read this announcement will buy new suits in the next three months, and most of these suits will be ready-to-wear garments produced in the big cities of the East.

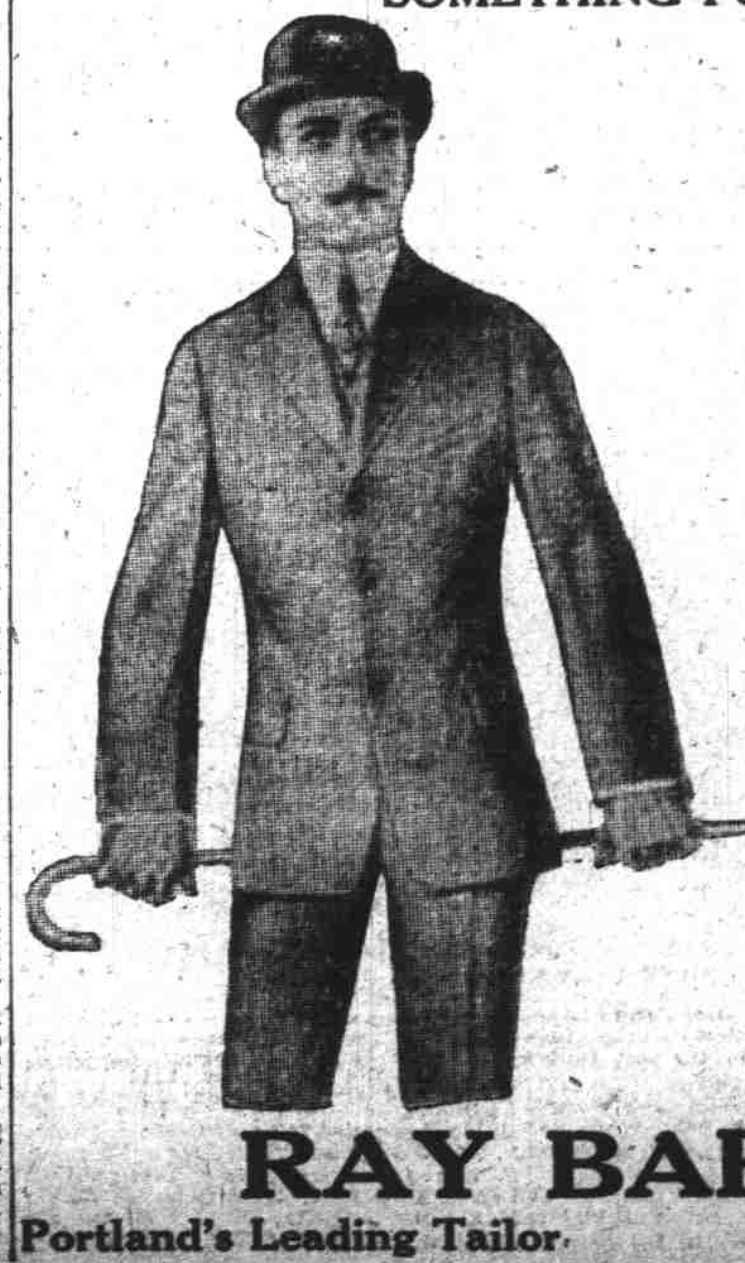

Now in order to provide work for the jobless tailors, and in appreciation of the immense patronage that has been afforded me in the past year, I will offer 500 suit patterns from my immense stock of domestic and imported wools, good for all year wear, at

Only $20 Made to Order

Now the tailors are in earnest about this. They want work—they need work—and it is only through their co-operation, their willingness to give an overplus for their wages, that I am able to make such an unusual offer to the public.

AN IRONCLAD GUARANTEE

I promise a perfect fit to each customer. Every suit tried on in the fitting and tried again when finished. If you are not satisfied ask for your money back. You'll get it without fuss or argument.
