

"GET ORDERS FIRST," SHIPS WILL FOLLOW, SAYS COMMISSIONER

E. N. Hurley of Illinois Here to Preside at Federal Trade Hearing Tomorrow.

INTERESTED IN SHIPPING

Study Made of Export Trade: Visited South America at Request of President Wilson.

Development of our export trade is the most important matter that will come up for consideration at the hearing by the federal trade commission in Portland tomorrow.

Edward N. Hurley of Illinois, vice chairman of the commission, says he has little patience with those persons who howl that our foreign trade cannot be developed because we have no ships.

"Get the orders first, and we will get the ships somehow," he said. Mr. Hurley said he has been particularly interested in questions relating to shipping and export trade because of his large manufacturing interests, and an investigation he made into South American conditions a year ago.

In 1914 he visited South America and made a study of trade conditions and credits in Argentina, Brazil, Chile and Peru. He went under a designation by President Wilson, and upon his return made a report to the secretary of commerce.

"I think you people on the coast are awake to your opportunities for trade expansion," said Mr. Hurley, "but the country at large is not."

The Chamber of Commerce is urging the leading men in Portland engaged in export business to be present at the conference with the federal trade commission, which will begin at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning, on the fifth floor at the Chamber of Commerce.

Matters relating to the flour trade, the cereal trade and lumber and furniture and paper trade will be considered.

W. D. Wheelwright has been asked to present shipping conditions from a general standpoint, while E. W. Wright will present them from a local standpoint.

J. N. Teal will speak for the lumber industry, and A. L. Mills and Edward Cookingham will discuss finances and banking.

Matters relating to the fresh fruit and canned and dried fruit industries will be considered.

C. C. Colt, president of the Chamber of Commerce, will preside.

CHANGES IN LINES AROUND ISLANDS ADD TO PORTLAND HARBOR

and show much more graphically than words the changes in the harbor and the additional area gained for Portland harbor as a result of these changes.

Many Public Benefits.

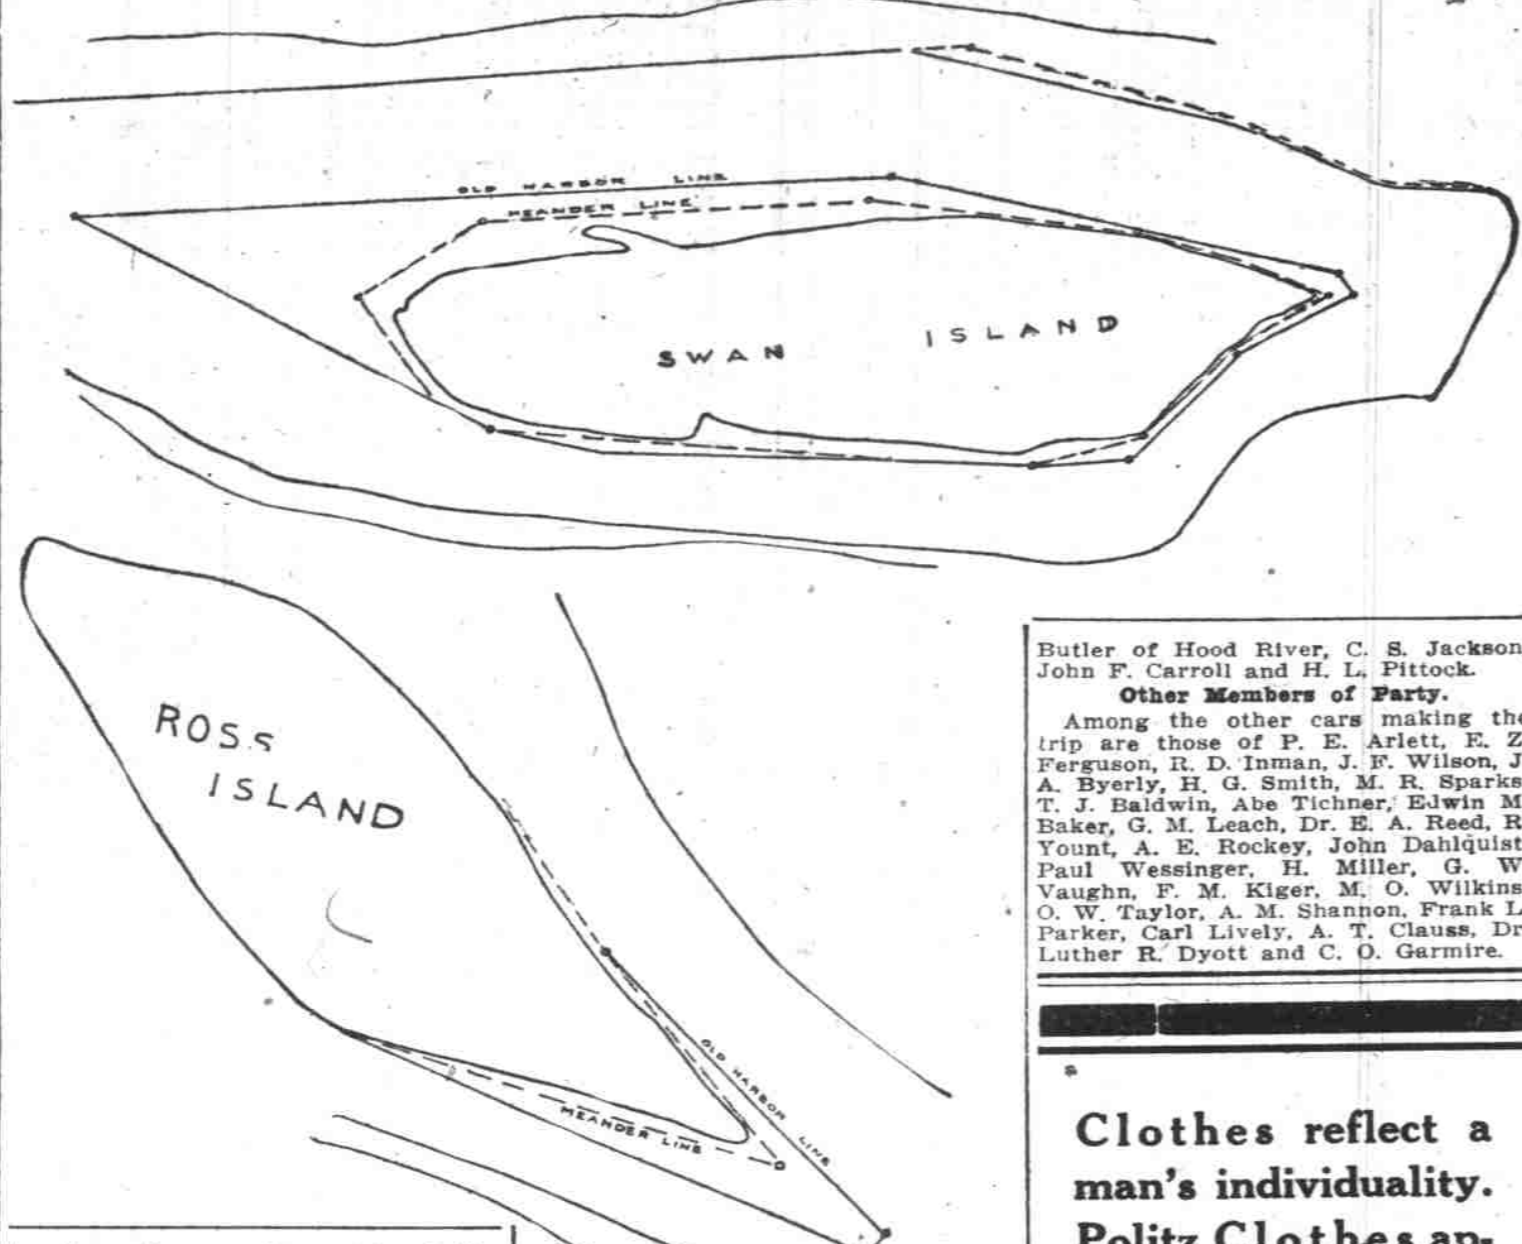

All in all it's a case of pure subtraction, the new being deducted from the old.

There are, too, many potential public benefits brought by the changes—benefits that are largely axiomatic.

An improved harbor means cheaper transportation, an increased commerce, a more efficient and desirable port for ships to enter. A broader harbor in turn means an increased area for public docks.

Every addition to Portland's harbor facilities and harbor area puts Portland in a better position to compete with the other ports of the Pacific.

PORTLAND'S HARBOR INCREASED BY RECENT RULING OF THE WAR DEPARTMENT

based on the precedent of a similar case in Virginia where the Greenleaf Lumber company operating on the Elizabeth river lost its appeal against changes in harbor lines on that stream.

The tenor of the decision is that lines made by the war department can be changed by that department if the necessities of navigation require.

BOY FROM PORTLAND SERIOUSLY HURT IN FALL WITH AIRSHIP

and was known as the richest man in the army.

Sutton was rushed to the army hospital upon being taken from the wreckage of the aeroplane. Knox was dead when extricated.

The reports of the accident forwarded here said Sutton made every effort to right the aeroplane as he started to fall. It made two spirals in the descent, but the lieutenant was unable to bring it to an even keel and was entangled in the wreckage when the machine crashed to the ground.

Lieutenant R. B. Sutton, was injured, perhaps fatally, in an aeroplane fall at Fort Sill, Okla., this morning. He is the son of Rose B. Sutton of 784 Hoyt street, and J. N. Sutton, also of Portland. The father and mother were divorced last summer.

Should Lieutenant Sutton die, two tragedies instead of one will be written in the family history. Eight years ago Lieutenant Sutton's brother met death mysteriously at Annapolis naval academy. The government report said suicide, but the mother and family have held to the theory that he was killed by means other than his own hands.

Lieutenant Sutton is 24 years old. He was appointed to West Point from Portland in 1909, and graduated in 1913. He was a basketball star at Lincoln high school in his teens, and as a member of the Multnomah club was a strong swimmer and tennis player.

Continuing his basketball career at West Point, he was the star of the army team, and through his splendid work the navy team was defeated time after time. He won the army "A" for his basketball.

He was born in Redondo, Cal., and came to Portland with his parents 12 years ago.
