WOMEN ARE TOLD HOW TO RETAIN HUSBAND AFTER THEY GET HIM

Madame De la Vie, Beauty Expert, Lectures to Large Audience.

Beauty Hints.
"I believe in rouge."
"Beauty is woman's greatest asset."
"An actress needs it to hold the public."
"The wife needs it to hold her husband."
"The business woman needs it to hold her position."
"The pretty woman is beautiful, the pity of it is she doesn't know it."
"Men have whatever the barber orders, but women worry over the expense of a shampoo."
"Use any and everything that will make you look better providing it is not injurious."

MADAME DE LA VIE

Absolutely sane living, temperance in all things, lots of water inside and out, soap and water, face powder, exercises and the use of a few creams and lotions—these are some of the things recommended by Madame De la Vie, the eastern beauty expert, in her opening lecture to the women of Meier & Frank's store yesterday afternoon.

"All women really want to look as well as they can," said the expert. "But most of them don't want to badly enough to take five minutes a day to keep youthful and beautiful; yes, that is all that is required—two minutes for your face and one for the rest of your body. Tomorrow I am going to tell you how to get a husband and keep him. I ought to know, I got one about a year ago and I still have him, and on Wednesday I am going to tell you how to look 35 until you are 85. That isn't a joke, it's the truth. I am doing it and you can do it."

Can't Be Cross and Beautiful.
"Women are the most beautiful and the most unselfish creatures in the world, and they have the best dispositions. If they are cross and irritable it is because they are not well, so my first rule is to be beautiful, because, of course, no woman who is cross and irritable can be beautiful at the same time. The average woman spends hours and hours trying to get a husband, but she is unwilling to spend five minutes trying to keep him, but remember that after you get one, there are still many who haven't one and they are still making themselves beautiful and then I manage to get a husband, they may get him away from you. That may sound like a joke, but alas, it is a very tragic truth as many of you know."

My Advice is to Live Rationally.
"My advice is to live rationally, sensibly, avoid worry and use a few of the preparations that I will tell you about. Do not be afraid of soap and water for your face. I use it every night and then I massage my face, neck, back and hands with cold cream, leaving it on all night."

Pretty Gown Adds to Effect.
"In the morning I rub it off with a Turkish towel, apply a face cream and powder, fluff my hair, put on a pretty gown—don't keep them for company; put them on for your husband to see—and I look so good to him that he doesn't care some pale pink or sky blue stonographer to lunch. He is proud of me and he takes me. I recommend no particular kind of soap; just any good pure soap. Spread some cold cream on a Turkish towel and pull it back and forth across your back and it will work wonders. If you are inclined to have a wrinkle between your eyes, press it out, rub in a little cream and then apply a little piece of court plaster and leave it on all night. When you frown it will hurt and you will finally give up trying. Be careful to massage the lines away from the corners of the eyes and a little hair from in front and back of the ears. Do this with an upward rotary motion."

How to Beautify Hair.
"Melt yellow vaseline and drop it from a medicine dropper onto the scalp and rub it in well. Alternate this treatment with a good hair tonic, any kind, providing it does not contain more than 60 per cent alcohol. Yellow vaseline will also thicken and darken the eyebrows and lashes. Wash your face every day and drink not less than six glasses of water a day, always between meals, unless you want to grow stout. Olive oil is a fine flesh builder. If you want to get thin, rub every morning before dressing. It will iron down the flesh and make you look much more slender."

A delightful concert was given prior to the lecture by a violinist, cellist, pianist and vocalist. The hall was crowded to overflowing with women, and a few men.

ABOUT THE HOUSE Buying things at the door is a fascinating vice. It is a game of chance. With the lust of gambling it also combines the lure of the bargain. I know of a woman, not here, but in a nearby city, who bought a ham from a peddler, being assured by him that it was fresh from his smoke-house. So it was, the first meal off of it tasted fine, but inside of a week that ham had grown whisks. Only lately have scores of Portland women been "taken in" by peddlers of so-called "Irish linen," the material being nothing more than mercerized cotton. How many of us have subscribed for magazines at bargain prices—two publications for the price of one, perhaps—only to find that the receipt had been signed by an entirely irresponsible person, who gave no address and in consequence the magazines never came. The psychological desire created by the peddler's clever art, has no more relation to actual demand than the canvasser's business has to legitimate commerce. The house to house traffic peddler is inclined to attribute to the competing merchant who pays taxes and stands behind his goods, but for one thing—it seldom supplies anything that his customers really desire.

BAKED CUSTARD Four cups milk, 6 eggs, 1/2 cup sugar, 1/4 teaspoon salt, few gratings of nutmeg. Beat eggs slightly, add sugar and salt, pour on slowly scalded milk, strain in buttered milk, set in pan of hot water. Sprinkle with nutmeg and bake in a slow oven until firm—which may be readily determined by running a silver knife through custard. If knife comes out clear custard is done. During baking care must be taken that water surrounding mold does not reach boiling-point. Custard will whey. Eggs and milk in combination must be cooked at a low temperature.

FALL FASHION CHAT Never has there been a season when fashions have offered more in the way of diversity of styles, with flaring girdles, made more pronounced by insertions of featherbone or cords, or with crinolined facings. This sort of a style obtains for either gown or suit and is an accepted vogue, but almost in direct contradiction there is offered the skirt of shrunken dimensions with a very, very narrow lining, but draped with polonaise folds voluminous and puffy an appearance of greater width even is obtained than that which the really wide skirt provides. Such a skirt is a type definite belongs to the dance frock, dinner gown or evening frock class.

At the present moment the fur-trimmed circular skirt of cloth or velvet, both of drabby color to match, is the high style notch which the modes for costumes for street wear have reached. Costumes being worn on Fifth avenue at this moment are wintery enough in character to be suitable for December and January weather requirements. Coats for suits are of the box, bolero or Norfolk type. Round yokes, cut back at the neck, with two inverted pleats at either side, captured and cut off by a wide belt, which progresses no farther than the under arm seam, are also used. The belt appears at the front, do not expect to find it continued around the back. In this latter event a box effect is obtained. Lengths for Norfolk or other styles, not including, of course, the bolero designs, are the hip line.

BABY'S BATH One way to make less trying is to have a little basket carefully filled with everything needed. This relieves you of the strain of having to remember each article and also of the embarrassment of finding, for instance, just as you begin to wash the baby that you have no soap. Here is what the baby basket should contain: A box of talcum powder or rice powder. A jar of white vaseline. A cake of pure castile soap. A bottle of boric acid solution, 10 grains to the ounce. A bath thermometer. A soft baby hair brush. Large squares of soft old linen for towels. Small squares of old linen for wash cloths, squares of surgeon's lint. A bath blanket. A complete set of clean clothes. Dry the baby as quickly as possible, for he will soon become impatient if he remains in the wet fold of top apron and let him lie on the under layer, which is still warm

An Everyday Cake
Here is a simple and inexpensive cake that can be varied in many ways with different frostings and icings. It looks a little nicer baked in a tube pan, but will be equally as good baked in a square loaf.

K C Gold Cake
By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine.

1 cup butter; 1 cup sugar; yolks of 3 eggs; beaten light; 1 cup flour; less 2 tablespoonsful; 2 level teaspoonsful K C Baking Powder; 1 cup milk; grated rind of 1 orange.

Sift flour and baking powder together three times; cream butter and sugar, beat yolks of eggs, add these to creamed mixture, and lastly add the moisture and flour alternately, beating batter until smooth. Gold Cake can only be made successfully by beating yolks of eggs, very, very creamy and light lemon colored, using a rotary beater. The rotary beater is the only beater that will do justice to the yolks of eggs. The beating kills all egg taste and improves the texture of the cake.

Cocoonat Frosting
Beat the whites of 2 eggs dry; gradually beat in half a cup of sifted confectioner's sugar and continue the beating until the frosting is smooth, thick and glossy; then beat in grated cocoonat, fresh or prepared, and spread upon the cake. This frosting is made thick by beating rather than by sugar.

Save this recipe. You will want to use it frequently. Or better, send us the colored certificate packed in each 25-cent can of K C Baking Powder and we will mail you "The Cook's Book" containing this and 89 other baking recipes equally good—all by Mrs. Hill. Jaques Mfg. Co., Chicago.

Chinook Salmon Overcrowd Creek Near Bonneville

* Anglers who were out along the Columbia Sunday returned with the story that Tanner creek, near Bonneville, is so jammed with Chinook salmon that the fall run of the creek cannot find room in the water. Hatchery officials have built a trap or barrier and are hauling out these fish by the hundred, freezing them and preserving them for food for the spring fry produced at the hatchery.

* Blaine Hallock, one of the most ardent of Portland's fishermen, declared today that the congestion in the creek is the tightest he has ever known. The creatures were churning the water to froth, fighting each other and rolling over and over in one writhing mass.

* This proved a "good mine" for the fishermen along the river, who had no difficulty in dragging out all they could take care of. Many vandals were also on the job and destroyed many fish until the superintendent of the hatchery put a stop to them. Anglers found much sport in the river near the mouth of the creek, every cast usually resulting in a strike through the fish were not so gamey as to produce the climax of excitement.

Ibsen's "Peer Gynt" Feature at People's

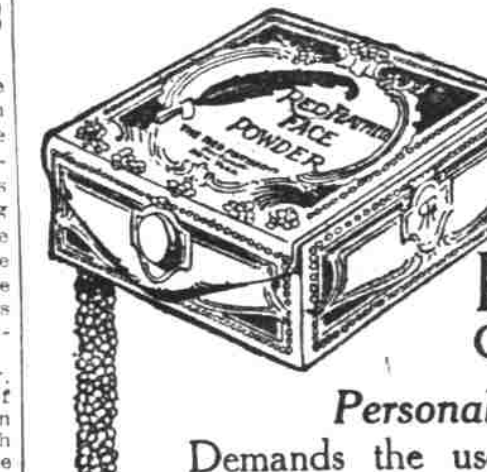

"Peer Gynt," Ibsen's enchanting tale of peasant life in Norway, is the film attraction at the People's theatre this week, and is drawing tremendous crowds. Cyril Maude is playing the title role, clothing it with all the abandon of the carefree boy and the "airs" of the average successful man who has "come up." Grieg's "Peer Gynt Suite" music which accompanies the picture.

Peer Gynt, a Norwegian peasant boy, becomes a dreamer, imagining himself a fairy hero. His escapades begin in his boyhood, when he runs away with a girl who is about to become the bride of another man. He is sought by the indignant relatives, although the girl returns to her home.

He builds him a cabin in the woods and his real sweetheart comes to him, but his love of adventure finally gets the best of him and he goes to America, where he becomes finally a rich plantation owner.

He takes a party of friends around the world in his private yacht. They decide to play a joke on him, and leave him stranded in an unknown country. His experiences and adventures are many, but he finally finds his way to his own country and to the little cabin where the sweetheart of his youth, now bent and gray as he himself, is, still waiting, for she has never once lost faith in him.
