JAPANESE DAY AT LAND SHOW PROVES MOST INTERESTING

With the prosaic theatre transformed into a Japanese tea garden, with signs in Japanese marking many of the booths and with circulars in Japanese distributed in many instances Japanese day at the Manufacturers' and Land Products show was true to its name. Japanese women in native garb served tea and rice cakes all afternoon and evening to the show visitors free of charge. McElroy's band played the Japanese anthem, and scores of Portland Japanese visited the show and expressed a keen interest in its exhibits.

Hard Luck Story Nearly Gets Two Women in Trouble

Explaining that they had come from Ireland to the San Francisco exposition and were stranded in this country, and were trying to raise money to get back home, two women, at the office of Dr. Andrew C. Smith at 413 Medical building yesterday, sold Mrs. Smith an imitation Irish lace piece for $7. The article was later proven to be worth only $1.50 at the very highest appraisal. The two women were held at the physician's office, and although they returned the money, were arrested by Detectives Kelleher, Coleman and Snow, and charged with peddling without a license. They gave the names of Sadie Gorman and Winnie Hayden. One of the women is in a delicate condition, and her husband is in the hospital, and the city license department this morning decided not to prosecute her.

PORTLAND MAN IN LINE FOR PROMOTION

Woman Turns Down Substitute Husband

El Centro, Cal., Man's Scheme to Put Another in His Place So He Could Leave Wife Didn't Work Slight. El Centro, Cal., Nov. 4.—(P. N. S.)—Desiring to leave for other parts, George Smith solved the family problem, according to the police, by arranging for a substitute husband. Mrs. Smith told the authorities that he and Edward Jones, the substitute, had said it would be all right by law. She investigated and then had both men arrested.

Accident Near Woodland.

Woodland, Wash., Nov. 4.—While coming into town in his automobile from the north, the machine collided with a spring wagon belonging to J. J. Guild, which was occupied by two of his children and Mrs. Bennett. One of the Guild children was thrown to the pavement and badly bruised. The rig was badly torn up and upset, and considerable damage was done to the auto.

INDIANS DIG BODIES OF DEAD FROM THEIR GRAVES AND REBURY

While Warden of the Happy Hunting Ground Looks On Ceremony Is Performed.

The Dalles, Or., Nov. 4.—Indians from The Dalles, Goldendale, Yakima, Warm Springs and Celilo, gathered at Cascade Locks, have completed the celebration of a curious annual custom—that of exhuming and reburying their dead. Securing the right from Hood River county officials to observe this custom, the Indians traveled into Cascade Locks for miles around. The ceremonies occupied several days, and it was a solemn and serious occasion with the participants. Arising early in the morning, the Indians, with picks and shovels, dug up the bodies of their dead. They then wrapped them in new blankets and reburied the remains in new coffins, if the old ones were in any way decomposed.

Proceedings Are Watched. The spirit of the "happy hunting ground god" is supposed to be carefully watching to see that these proceedings are carefully attended to. The squaws did a lot of mourning while the braves danced and crooned mournful melodies.

The occasion takes the form of a "potlatch" before the ceremonies close. Last week the poorer class of Indians were made happy by many gifts from their richer brothers. One rich Indian scattered his gifts around on the ground and his beneficiaries scrambled after them, governed by the injunction, "finders are keepers." Others gave presents of food, clothing and money more quietly to their friends.

Behavior Is Good. It is the custom at these potlatches for the rich Indians to give away everything they have with them before they leave the burial grounds. Sometimes a wealthy Indian gives all he possesses. Others, more crafty, take with them only that which they wish to give away.

Cascade Locks was a city of tents. Upon this occasion the Indians are never disorderly, and very little "fire water" is consumed. They make the celebration one of religious solemnity.

Matron Hopkins Is Censured by Board

Salem, Or., Nov. 4.—Matron Hopkins, of the state industrial school for girls, was severely censured at the state board of control meeting yesterday afternoon for her action in bringing Mary Begg back to the institution after her marriage in Vancouver recently to a Portland young man. Secretary of State Olcott said that the state board of control had received some unenviable notoriety as a result of the episode and declared such a policy as that pursued by the matron was ill-advised. A resolution requiring that hereafter the matron secure the consent of the board of control before returning girls to the institution was adopted. Matron Hopkins contended that the girl was not returned because of her marriage, but because she had broken her parole. However, Attorney General Brown held that the girl could not break her parole by getting married and she was promptly released when her husband appeared and called for her. The father of Anna Larson, of Quinn, asked that she be released, but the board declined. Matron Hopkins declared that the girl had been in the school only four months and that she had not made a good record lately. There were 763,185 men employed in
