Serbs Believed Winning.

Between the French and the Ser right to the northwestward, is a break. For the Serbs' safety there was much anxiety early today and the Frenc line was extended to support it. Late accounts, however, were to the effect that the Serbs were having much the better of the Tetovo struggle and that the Bulgars were in serious disorder the Veles district. The town, erron ously reported earlier in the week Gallic hands, is understood to be nomentary danger of capture from the British in Difficult Region.

The British, operating in an exceedingly difficult country, are advancing more slowly.

The Serbs' prime object is to bend back the Bulgar right wing and effect a junction with their countrymen, Tom Tit Tot.—By Georgene Faulkner, Tom Tit Tot.—By Georgene Faulkner, "The Story Lady."

Incidentally, the turning of the Eulgar right flank will suit Franco-British purposes, but if these are read aright here, the French and English aim not so much at a drive straight porthward as they do at gaining con trol of the Nish-Saloniki railroad to the Serb town of Uskub, whence, it is believed, they will swing to the northnecting rail line on the Bulgar capital,

The main question here is whether the allies are yet in sufficient force in the Balkans for so ambitious a camtuden. Military men doubt it.
